U.S., Japan get warnings

Arabs ease their oil boycott on Europe

Arab oil producers today vowed no letup in the oil embargo against the United States and tightened the squeeze on Japan. Despite favored treatment by the Arabs, other countries drastically cut oil consumption.

Japan mounted a diplomatic offensive to get more Arab oil and prevent serious disruption of its economy, but Arab diplomats insisted Japan must break diplomatic relations with Israel to be exempted from the oil boycott.

"Japan cannot help us militarily, so the second thing to do is to cut relations with Israel," said Saudi Arabian oil minister Sheikh Ahmed Z. Ymani, in Vienna for a meeting of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC).

Yamari said he saw no chance for a revision of the Arab nations' stand towards the United States. "We don't see any reason for such a change so far," he said. "But we hope the United States States will increase efforts for a peace settlement in the Middle East."

Ten Arab oil producers — united in the Organization of Arab Petrolum Exporting Countries (OAPEC) —on Sunday called off a scheduled 5 per cent reduction in December oil supplies for all European Common Market countries with the exception of the Netherlands in appreciation for a pro-Arab policy declaration by the market.

But it meant little immediate relief to Britain which Monday cut deliveries of all oil products by 10 per cent. The measure stopped just short of direct rationing of gasoline and home heating oil.

West Germany will join Belgium and Holland in a Sunday driving ban Nov. 25 and the Bonn government Monday reduced the nationwide speed limit to 62 miles per hour to save fuel. Maximum fines for violating the ban are $75,000 in Belgium and $60,000 in West Germany.

Japan gets 85 per cent of its oil imports from the Middle East, about half of it from Arab countries. But a Japanese embassy spokesman in Vienna said Western oil companies have also cut Japanese supplies from Iran and Indonesia by 10 per cent to improve supplies for the United States.

The Japanese government has already asked industries to cut oil and electricity consumption by 10 per cent, car owners to stop driving on Sundays and holidays and cabarets and bars to close early.

OPEC spokesmen in Vienna took pains to point out Monday that the year-end meeting of cabinet ministers in Vienna was not political and not connected to the Middle East crisis.

"We discussed merely technical questions as OPEC is not a political organization," OPEC secretary general Abderrahman Khene said.

Ecuador was admitted to the OPEC, increasing the number of members from 11 to 12. There was no decision on membership applications from Gabon and Trinidad, Khene said.

The two countries would neutralize the Arabs' present 7-5 domination of the organization.

Arab grain supply 'safe'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The United States probably will not cut off wheat sales to Arab nations in retaliation against the oil embargo because the Soviet Union easily could fill the grain gap, Agriculture Secretary Earl L. Butz indicated Monday.

Assistant Agriculture Secretary Carroll Brunthaver, joining Butz at a news conference, said the Soviets may stop buying wheat from the United States next year if they get a good 1974 crop following a record 1973 harvest.

Brunthaver, just returned from a trip to Moscow, said he believes the 1973 Russian grain harvest may be "some above" the record 215-million tons claimed publicly by Soviet officials.

Pomonan killed in hit-run mishap

POMONA — A pedestrian was killed Sunday evening when he was struck by a hit-run driver in Towne Avenue north of Fourth Street.

Alfred Eugene Carlson, 57, 397 S. Towne Ave., was pronounced dead on arrival at Pomona Valley Community Hospital. The impact of the crash carried the victim 68 feet, authorities reported.

A witness later told police he was driving behind the vehicle which hit Carlson. The witness described the vehicle as a green, older-model pickup truck, probably a Chevrolet. He said it was driven by a youth who had a girl passenger. They appeared to be talking as they approached the pedestrian, he said.

The witness said he honked his car born in attempt to alert the pickup driver, but the truck slammed into Carlson. After the impact the driver failed to stop and continued northbound across Mission Boulevard and turned east into an alley.

The place where Carlson was struck was unlighted and the victim was wearing dark clothing, police said. He was crossing Towne avenue eastbound. The witness said Carlson was not in a crosswalk and was jaywalking.

Police said the vehicle which hit Carlson probably has minor front end damage.

Carlson was the 14th person killed in traffic accidents this year on Pomona city streets.

Official terms action a very real possibility

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A nationwide ban on Sunday driving and other emergency energy-saving measures are "very real possibilities" because of the nation's energy crisis, one of President Nixon's top energy advisers warned Congress today

Charles DiBona, the President's special assistant for fuel, told a joint House-Senate hearing that even total compliance with current conservation measures such as turning down thermostats and a 50-mile per hour speed limit will not be sufficient.

He said that an optimistic assessment of these conservation measures, plus hope for increases in domestic supplies, will provide only 2.3 million barrels of oil a day while the shortage is about 3 million barrels a day.

"This means that we're going to have to have stronger, strict mandatory measures?" asked Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis.

"Yes sir, and soon," DiBona replied. DiBona said that among the "very real possibilities" the administration was considering was a ban on Sunday driving. He said that 25 per cent of all gasoline used in private cars is consumed on weekends.

Among other proposals being considered are a ban on fuels for private boats and aircraft; closing public parks to automobiles; closing service stations on weekends; and blue laws to close all businesses on Sunday, he said.

Sen. Hubert Humphrey, D-Minn., chairman of the Joint Economic Committee, asked if gasoline rationing was not a better alternative.

"We have people aggressively pursuing a rationing program, but it's a tough, tough, tough job to draw up a plan that is equitable," DiBona said.

In the News

GOP governors get 'bad news'

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (UPI) — Pollster George Gallup told Republican governors today that if congressional elections were held now, the Democrats might win enough seats to pass any legislation they wanted over President Nixon's veto.

Gallup, delivering what he called "the bad news" at the winter conference at the 19-member Republican Governors' Association, said the Nov. 6 elections clearly showed "the effects of Watergate on state and local politics."

In New Jersey, where Republicans lost the governorship, Gallup said there was "a pretty discouraging picture" for the GOP.

Palace bombed in Phnom Penh

By United Press International

A Cambodian Air Force T28 fighter-bomber attacked Phnom Penh's ornate presidential palace today, dropping a ton of bombs on the Chamcar Mon but missing President Lon Nol.

Official sources said one of four 250-pound, American-made bombs landed only 100 yards from the six-star general, but did not harm him. Three other persons were reported killed and 10 wounded.

Immediate peace parley proposed

By United Press International

Egypt said today it favors the immediate convening of an Arab-Israeli peace conference under United Nations auspices without waiting for the outcome of Israeli elections at the end of December.

The statement came from Egyptian government spokesman Ahmed Anis in Cairo as Israeli and Egyptian officers met for the fifth time today on the Cairo-Suez in what could be the final phase of their Middle East cease-fire negotiations.

First major storm brings an inch of rain to valley, snow to Baldy

Fair weather with sunny afternoons is forecast throughout the week after a storm that brought the first snowfall of the year to Mt. Baldy and more than an inch of rainfall to Pomona Valley communities.

The valley's first major rainfall of the season caused a power outage to some 2,000 customers of Southern California Edison Co. over the weekend. Fire departments throughout the valley were kept busy putting out small fires started by lightning strikes, and in some cases units were called to dry out houses flooded from leaky roofs from the heavy storm.

West End sheriff's deputies today were combing the snow-covered San Antonio Peak at Mt. Baldy for a 16-year old Pasadena youth who was reported missing about noon Sunday.

Sub freezing temperatures of 29 degrees were recorded at the ranger station at Mt. Baldy at 4 p.m. Sunday. From two to four inches of snow fell Sunday afternoon in the Snow Crest Lodge area of Mt. Baldy and 12 inches were reported at Kelly's Camp at the edge of the Cucamonga Wilderness area adjacent to Thunder Mountain.

Earl Adams of the Snow Crest Lodge at Mt. Baldy said snow started to fall there about noon Sunday and stopped about 7 p.m. Only patches of the snow remain today, he said. He said much of the snow was carted off by the many visitors to the resort area Sunday.

Areas of Padua Hills reported hail Sunday afternoon and lightning struck at several locations in Claremont.

Claremont Fire Department put out a fire in the garage of Don Small, 226 Princeton Ave., when an electric overload started a fire in the roof.

A pump house owned by the California Cities Water Co. was apparently damaged and a fire resulted when it was struck by lightning Sunday afternoon.

Relatives of the missing hiker, Christian Anderson, Pasadena, said the young man was wearing only a blue sweater, blue jeans and boots when he left for a hike. He planned to hike from San Antonio Falls, about three miles from Mt. Baldy, to the summit.

The search began Sunday when light snow began to fall in the area. The young man apparently had had little hiking experience, deputies said.

Members of the San Bernardino County Sheriff's Search and Rescue Team joined the West End team for an intensive search of the area.

We started the search Sunday afternoon, but had to secure by nightfall because of the heavy snow, Sgt. Ed Balllinger of the West End Sheriff's sub-station said this morning.

"Its pretty rough up there right now."

The weather will take on a brighter outlook the remainder of the week. The weatherman has promised cool but sunny weather through Friday.

This morning's low temperature of 38 degrees was the coldest recorded temperature this season. The high today is expected to be 64 degrees with a chilly low tonight of 35 degrees.

Sunday's high temperature reached 60 degrees.

The weekend storm played havoc over much of Southern California. Winds up to 55 miles per hour, rain and hail were reported in some areas causing blackouts and traffic-halting mud slides.

Betty Proctor, 47, of La Puente was killed in a head-on collision in Industry at Valley Boulevard and Orange Avenue and Francisco Ramirez, 13, of Los Angeles was apparently electrocuted when he brushed a wet conduit with his knee while he was in water as he played under his house.

An 18-foot catamaran capsized at Marina de Rey and county lifeguards rescued the two occupants Sunday.

Smith named to new post with Donrey Media group

FT. SMITH, Ark. — Donald W. Reynolds, president of the Donrey Media Group, today named Fred W. Smith executive vice president of the group. Smith had been vice president of Donrey's western newspaper division, which includes the Progress-Bulletin.

As executive vice president, Smith will be the chief operating officer of the group and will be responsible for the operation of the 46 media outlets within the group. The Donrey Media Group owns newspapers, radio and television stations and outdoor advertising companies in 10 states. Reynolds will continue as president and chief executive officer.

Reporting to Smith in his new position will be Donrey division vice presidents including Ross Pendergraft, eastern newspaper division; J. L. Jennings, central newspaper division; Joseph W. McMurray, broadcasting division; Don Burris, outdoor advertising division; and E. H. Patterson, financial and management services division.

Reynolds stated that the Smith appointment is in keeping with the continuing growth of the Donrey Media Group and the scope and complexity of its daily operation.

Smith has been with the Donrey Media Group since he was graduated from Arkansas Polytehcnic College in 1951. He began as a classified advertising salesman for the Southwest Times Record in Fort Smith, a job which he held until 1954 when he was named classified advertising manager. Later, Smith became advertising director and assistant general manager of the newspaper.

In 1961, he became vice president and general manager of Donrey's Las Vegas Review-Journal. In 1966, he was named vice president of Donrey's western newspaper division, directly supervising Donrey's newspapers in Nevada, California and Washington.

Bodies of four slain teens found in South Dakota park

SIOUX FALLS, S D. (UPI) — The bodies of four Sioux Falls teen-age boys, all apparently killed by shotgun blasts, were found late Sunday in an isolated state park area.

Sheriff Craig Vinson of Lyon County, Iowa, identified the victims as Roger Essen, 17; Stewart Baade, 18; his brother, Dana Baade, 14, and Michael Hadrath, 15, all of Sioux Falls.

Vinson said preliminary investigation showed the boys had all been killed by shotgun blasts in Gitchie Manitou State Park, about 14 miles east of Sioux Falls and close to the northwestern Iowa border.

The identities were released shortly after authorities scheduled autopsies here for all four boys.

Minnehaha County authorities and Lyon County officers were working with Iowa and South Dakota State Police in the investigation.

Minnehaha County Sheriff Gene Gruhlke, Sioux Falls, said the bodies were found late Sunday at the remote state park. He speculated that the shootings occurred late Saturday night or early Sunday.

An all-points bulletin was issued for a dark blue 1967 Chevrolet van, believed to have belonged to one of the victims.

A-bomb Keenan gives up his vigil

DEBORGIA, Mont. (UPI) — "A-Bomb" Keenan is leaving his atom haven.

It has been 27 years since Bill Keenan and his family fled their Long Island home and a prosperous construction business in New York to settle in this sparsely populated valley in the mountains of western Montana.

Stories about Keenen's flight from the atomic war he was certain would come "sooner or later" appeared in newspapers around the country.

He was a minor celebrity in that era, when school children drilled for an atomic attack and citizens joined the ground observer corps to watch the skies for enemy aircraft.

But over the years, Keenan has stopped worrying about the bomb and learned to live with it.

Now he plans to retire late this year from the postmaster job he has held for 24 years and move to Arizona to be near three of his daughters who live in Tucson.

The advancing years, and perhaps the fear he would be scoffed at by a generation which has learned to live with the threat of a mushroomshaped cataclysm, have made Keenan reluctant to discuss his long-ago fears.

He told UPI in an interview he was "probably" fleeing more from the congestion, filth and "evil element" which he saw crowding in on the East Coast in those post-war years.

The Atom Haven Cafe which the Keenans built here has given way to a combination post office and living quarters.

Keenan looks much younger than his 70 years, attesting, he said, to the quality of life in this tiny community located in a mountain valley almost midway between Missoula, Mont., and Spokane, Wash.

The Keenans have watched their tiny community grow from 51 residents to nearly 200 during the years his five children grew up and moved on to California and Arizona.

And now Keenan said he sees some of the same "evil elements" he fled from creeping in here.

"Hippies are moving in and there's a drug problem in the schools," he said. So the Keenns plan to move to southern Arizona after he retired Dec. 31.

"Not to Tucson itself," he said. "Living there is almost as congested and hurried as the life we left in New York."

While Keenan has stopped worrying about the bomb, he cautiously suggests that a nuclear conflict still seems "inevitable."

And he considers the Middle East, where he spent two years on a construction project in what was then Palestine, as the eventual spark.

"But no one seems to give a damn, now," he said.

Food processing, retail industries' profits dip

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Record food prices for consumers didn't produce profit gains for the food processing and retailing industries through the first half of this year, an Agriculture Department report indicates.

The report estimated that for all of 1973, the cost of marketing foods produced on American farms may reach $83 billion. This would be 8 per cent above 1972 compared with an average annual increase of 5.2 per cent during the past decade.

Other data in the report indicated that for the first half of 1973, at least, the increased marketing charges levied by processors and retailers were going into higher wages and other operating costs rather than higher profits.

The report said after-tax profits for corporations processing and manufacturing foods averaged 2.4 per cent in the second quarter this year, slightly less than a year earlier. In contrast, profits for all manufacturing industries in the same quarter were 5.1 per cent compared with 4.5 per cent a year earlier.

According to the report, after-tax profits as a percentage of sales for bakery corporations were 1.3 per cent in the first half of 1973 compared with 2.4 per cent a year earlier. Meat packer profits were 0.95 per cent in the first half compared with 0.90 per cent a year earlier. Dairy firms showed a slight decline, but textile mills boosted first-half profits to 3.1 per cent compared with 2.4 per cent a year earlier.

Food retailing profits dipped in the first six months of 1973, the report said. After-tax profits for 15 leading chains averaged 0.55 per cent of sales compared with 0.75 per cent a year earlier and 0.45 per cent in the last half of 1972.

New strike deadline set in food industry crisis

By United Press International

Teamsters, meat cutters, operating engineers and machinists Sunday set a new strike deadline for Dec. 2 while continuing negotiations with the California food industry.

Some 9,000 Northern California butchers and 16,000 Southern California union members had set a strike deadline of midnight Sunday before agreeing late Saturday to continue negotiations.

A strike would have affected 64 California supermarket chains and their 1,000 outlets.

There was speculation the strike was postponed after Teamster President Frank Fitzsimmons met with union leaders. Fitzsimmons met with growers last week in San Diego.

Government mediators are taking part in the discussions in Los Angeles and San Francisco between union representatives and the Food Employers Council, Inc.

The Los Angeles talks involve 7,000 butchers, 6,500 Teamster drivers and members of some 27 other union locals representing engineers, machinists and warehousemen.

In Northern California, the 9,000 butchers of the Amalgamated Meat Cutters and Butcher workem, AFL-CIO are affected.

A management spokesman said the unions are seeking a $1 an hour hike for their members along with fringe benefits. The contracts expired Sept. 2.

Supreme Court to hear Detroit integration case

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Supreme Court agreed today to review an order that calls for integration of Detroit's mostly black inner city schools with those of the surrounding white suburbs.

The eventual opinion, to be issued after arguments later this term, is expected to resolve the widespread controversy over integration of metropolitan schools across county lines.

Young drifter admits setting apartment fire

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — A young drifter with an arson record, paroled only a week earlier from an Arizona reform school, has admitted setting the deadliest structural blaze in the city's history, police said Sunday.

Michael Altenburger, 18, was being held on suspicion of murder in the Stratford Apartment fire, which killed 24 persons late Thursday night and early Friday.

Police and arson investigators said they would bring charges against Altenburger today or Tuesday.

Retired Roman Catholic Cardinal John Francis McIntire was to say a special mass today for the dead—most of whom were Mexican-Americans —at a church in the downtown Los Angeles neighborhood of the Stratford.

The case against Altenburger includes "physical evidence" in addition to his confession, investigators said. They would not say what that evidence is.

The fire broke out about 11 p.m. in a sofa in the lobby of the Stratford, a 64-year-old three-story apartment house of wood frame construction that housed about 140 persons.

It blossomed fiercely up open stair wells, trapping residents on Upper floors. Some burned to death in their beds, others leaped to their deaths on the sidewalk below. Eight of the dead were children. Fifty-two persons were injured.

Altenburger was arrested some distance away, near the UCLA campus, by officers who found him sleeping on a bench at a bus stop, and brought in for routine questioning.

Police said it was learned then that he had been paroled Nov. 8, his 18th birthday, from the state Industrial School for Boys at Ft. Grant, Ariz., where he was sent after an arrest in September, 1972, for arson at a Tucson mobile home lot where he lived.

"Shortly after his arrest by police Friday, he did confess to setting the fire," said arson investigator Don Brian Sunday. "We've got a good case but I can't go into too much detail at this time."

In Papadopoulos uprising

Tanks stalk Athens

ATHENS (UPI) — Troops in tanks patrolled the streets to keep the peace today and Greek police rounded up suspects from three days of riots by workers and students demanding the overthrow of President George Papadopoulos.

Witnesses said "many busloads and army truckloads" of arrested suspects were taken to police security headquarters. A government spokesman said they would have their identities checked.

They faced arrest if the government felt they had been directly involved in the riots that began Friday and which appeared to have ended late Sunday night.

"The government will use all the means at the disposal of the martial law to restore complete order so that the country can resume its road towards elections," chief spokesman Spyros Ziournatzis said.

In most parts of Athens today, life seemed normal. Shops and offices were open and pedestrians moved freely. Schools operated and buses ran regularly.

In the center of the city, however, police diverted traffic from main arteries and police officers posted at street corners kept pedestrians moving. They picked up suspects and persons who taunted them.

Police helicopters flew over the city looking for possible demonstrations or gatherings.

Most of those arrested were young men with long hair, beards and mustaches and the casual dress of modern youth. Among them was a young woman in a miniskirt.

Opinions differ

Gasoline rationing still in limbo

WASHINGTON (UPI) — There were differences of opinion both within Congress and within the administration today on whether and how soon it will be necessary to ration gasoline.

President Nixon says he has asked Congress only for "contingency" authority to ration gasoline if that becomes necessary. He told a televised news conference with Associated Press managing editors in Orlando, Fla., Saturday that "our goal is to make it not necessary."

Two Democratic senators disagreed with the President's assessment Sunday. Sen. William Proxmire, Wis., said: "Gasoline rationing is essential. We have to have it no matter what happens. As it looks now we're going to have gasoline rationing for at least a year or so."

Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield, Mont., said rationing "is the only way that I can see, hard though it may be."

Mansfield said the President already has authority to ration gasoline under the 1950 Emergency Defense Act, "but he doesn't want to do it. He will, as he said last night, consider it only as a last resort, but in the meantime, the economy will burn, and people will freeze and industries will close down, unemployment will increase, inflation will go up and we're just paving the way to a recession next year."

Mansfield was interviewed on NBC's "Meet the Press;" Proxmire, on CBS "Face the Nation."

Congress is sharply divided on the issue. The Senate voted 48 to 40 last week to reject an amendment to the energy crisis bill, which would have required gasoline ration by Jan. 15, leaving it instead up to the President. The Senate scheduled eight hours of debate today on the bill, to give the President emergency powers to deal with the energy shortage, including rationing authority.

Division was also apparent within the administration. Energy adviser John A. Love, Interior Secretary Rogers C. B. Morton and domestic affairs adviser Melvin R. Laird have all talked of rationing as inevitable. Herbert Stein, head of the Council of Economic Advisers, has suggested raising gasoline taxes as a better way of limiting use of gasoline.

But Caspar W. Weinberger, secretry of health, education and welfare, said in a UPI weekend interview: "I don't know that at this point it is necessary to increase taxes or to ration." He urged continued "conservation," presumably meaning slower driving and fewer trips, and efforts to increase supply. 4

The dispute was just as much over who is responsible for the energy crisis as what to do about it.

Nixon Saturday put the blame on Congress. He said he sent seven legislative requests on energy to Congress two years ago and only one, the Alaska pipeline bill,has been passed.

"Well, he's wrong," said Mansfield when asked about Nixon's claim. "He is great on messages, he is great on rhetoric, telling the nation what he has proposed, but when it comes to legislation, he is wanting." He said the pending energy bill came from Democratic Sen. Henry Jackson, Wash., and Jackson's committee.

Pioneer craft nears Jupiter

MOUNTAIN VIEW, Calif. (UPI) — The Pioneer 10 spacecraft has passed the tiny outer moons of the giant planet Jupiter and is picking up speed due to gravitational pull.

The picture-snapping satellite will reach the middle three of Jupiter's 12 moons on Thursday, and on Dec. 3 will reach its closest point, 81,000 miles from the blue and orange striped planet.

It's present speed of 22,000 miles per hour will zoom to over 80,000 mph, the fastest of any manmade object, when the spacecraft reaches the rendezvous point. It will then bypass Jupiter, which has twice the mass of all the other planets in the solar system combined, and continue into the void of space.

NASA scientists said 10 photos were snapped over the weekend and more would be clocked off as the spacecraft approaches the largest planet, which possibly supports some form of life.

New Nixon drive produces praise, disputes

WASHINGTON (UPI) — In its first week, President Nixon's intensive drive to wipe the tarnish of the Watergate scandals from his public image by a new directness produced qualified praise from his political colleagues, a warm welcome in Georgia, and at least three new disputes.

Even strong Nixon critics praised him for his performance Saturday night in an hour-long televised news conference with 400 newspaper editors where the questions were tough and the answers detailed.

"The President did well," said Rep. Jerome Waldie, D-Calif., one of the first lawmakers to introduce a House resolution seeking Nixon's impeachment. "I think an awful lot more needs to be explained by the President, but nonetheless, I thought that he embarked upon a pretty constructive course of action."

Sen. George D. Aiken, R-Vt., Dean of Senate Republicans, said he thought that Nixon had been "pretty factual."

And Sen. Howard J. Baker Jr., R-Tenn., vice chairman of the Senate Watergate Committee, called Nixon's performance "masterful" and said he was "more human than I've seen him in a public presentation in a long time."

Early arrivals at a Republican governors conference in Memphis likewise welcomed the Nixon drive as a first step, but were guarded in predicting its success. There appeared to be little enthusiasm for any formal vote of support for the President.

Like comments from most of Nuxon's GOP visitors at the White House last week, reaction to Nixon's latest appearances for the most part was praise for the President's new openness and candor, but mixed with suggestions that much more factual evidence and explicit accounting for his behavior will be needed to restore public confidence in him. The White House, without releasing detailed figures on telephone calls, telegrams and other communications, said there had been "tremendous reaction" from the public favorable to the President's Saturday showing. Press Secretary Ronald L. Ziegler said it "quantitatively" surpassed the unfavorable response last month when Nixon fired Special Watergate Prosecutor Archibald Cox.

Nixon, on a campaign-style Sunday visit to Macon, Ga., to celebrate the 90th birthday of former Rep. Carl M. Vinson, received a boisterous welcome from some 20,000 persons along the way and heckling from scattered small groups. But the White House, which had had extensive advance preparations made for the visit, offered no interpretation of the crowd response.

Elsewhere, Robert Strauss, chairman of the Democratic National Committee, said he was not satisfied with Nixon's answers. "He hasn't been open with the public," Strauss said. "That's a great weakness and it's destroyed him."

In Akron, Chesterfield H. Smith, president of the American Bar Association, called on the House Judiciary Committee to hold a full and comprehensive investigation of whether Nixon should be impeached. "We must spend every effort to condemn and to eliminate unethical practices from the legal profession —and from the community and from society as a whole," Strauss said.

Nixon's new initiative may not show unequivocal resilts for some time, but its first week did produce new disputes over Nixon's behavior in the milk funds controversy, the Cox firing and the energy crisis.

In his news conference Nixon insisted he reversed his agriculture secretary and raised milk support prices not because of large campaign contributions from the dairy lobby but because Congress was poised to raise them even higher and would override any veto.

That explanation, said Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield, Mont., "won't hold water." It would be "the first instance I know of where this President has indicated that he had done something under pressure from Congress," he said.

Mansfield also took issue with Nixon's claim that Congress had for two years thwarted administration efforts to head off an energy crisis.

"The administration has been very backward in doing anything about the energy crisis which affects this country today and the administration knows it," Mansfield said.

In the Cox dispute, Nixon told visiting Republican congressmen last week that then Attorney General Elliot L. Richardson lied in the account of his resignation that Richardson gave the Senate Judiciary Committee. Nixon and aide Alexander M. Haig told the visitors Richardson had not said he would quit if Cox's efforts to get presidential documents were thwarted, as Richardson had testified.

Sunday the Washington Post said documents given the committee by Richardson supported his testimony.

All three men, Haig, Cox and Richardson should be summoned before the Judiciary Committee "pronto" to determine which version is true, said Mansfield.

Adviser suggests higher gas tax

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Chairman Herbert Stein of President Nixon's economic council suggested that higher taxes on gasoline and other energy sources to help alleviate shortages.

Stein was the latest of several administration officials to suggest higher taxes to ease the gasoline shortage in particular. Presidential adviser Melvin R. Laird has advocated surtaxes on virtually all fuels, as well as electricity.

Planners will consider bridle trail dedication

CLAREMONT — The Planning Commission Tuesday night will consider a staff recommendation that a 10-foot-wide bridel trail will be dedicated to the city along the south property line of tentative tract of 19.9 acres proposed by Lewis Homes of California south of Bluefield Drive between Mills Avenue and the future alignment of Grand Avenue.

The staff also recommended that individual properties be separated from the trail by a fence or wall, and that no lots front on Mills Avenue.

The staff was concerned that the proposed tract map for 52 lots did not indicate continuation of a bridle trail from the Lewis tract to the east.

The public hearing on the tentative tract had been continued from the Nov. 6 meeting.

The commission also will discuss its consideration of day care centers as requested by the National Organization of Women, Annexation 49 — Claremont Heights Drive, and the pre-zoning of the area.

The commission may also reach a favorable vote on "open house" signs which it was unable to obtain at its Nov. 6 meeting.

Ben-Gurion suffers stroke, is paralyzed

TEL AVIV (UPI) — David Ben-Gurion, former prime minister of Israel and one of the founders of the Jewish state, was in "serious condition' today after being partially paralyzed by a stroke.

Doctors at Tel Hashomer hospital outside Tel Aviv said the white-haired, 87-year-old elder statesman was felled Sunday by a cerebral hemorrhage that paralyzed his right side.

"I don't know in which direction he's going, but I'm optimistic," Dr. Boleslaw Goldman said. "He's in quite good shape for the situation tell. It takes time for the damage to heal."

Goldman said the former leader, who recently spent 10 days in the hospital with a respiratory ailment, had been ill several times in the past few years.

Drunk-driving charge holds bicycle rider

ONTARIO — A 37-year-old bicycle rider was arrested Friday on a drunk driving charge when an Ontario police officer observed a wobbling and weaving bicycle traveling west on Park Street near Vine Avenue.

Narciso Castrol Teniente of 619 W. Park St., according to Ontario Police Officer R. Scragg, was riding his bicycle in a erratic manner back and forth across Park Street.

Scragg said he arrested Teniente after giving him the field sobriety test. The officer said Teniente was holding a partially empty bottle of wine in a paper bag.

Teniente was booked in the West End Jail on suspicion of drunk driving.

Kidnaping-rape suspect shoots himself in head

POMONA — A 34-year-old man shot himself in the head Sunday night after police stopped his car to question him about an alleged kidnaping and rape incident.

Ralph Peter Chloros, 459 Valera St., was reported in critical condition today in Pomona Valley Community Hospital's intensive care unit. He had a bullet wound in the right side of his head, directly above the ear.

The shooting occurred at 10:30 p.m. after police had curbed Chloros and his wife, Cora Ann Chloros, in their car in the 1400 block of E. Holt Avenue.

Officer John Costello said he was standing near the car and had told Chloros to get out when he saw Chloros had a pistol in his right hand. Costello said he backed away reaching for his own weapon, when he heard the shot. The officer said he thought he had been fired at, and almost shot at Chloros' head when he saw the victim was slouched in the car seat, bleeding.

Chloros was taken to the hospital where X rays revealed a bullet lodged in his brain.

Officers reported that they stopped the Chloros auto because earlier Sunday an 18-year-old woman had told them that Chloros had entered her home armed with a pistol, forced her to accompany him to his home and threatened to kill her if she didn't submit. She also told them that the victim had attacked her a year ago in his home.

Police also said records revealed that the weapon Chloros had was stolen in Baldwin Park last January.

Multi-car crashes hurt Ontario woman and 3 others

POMONA — An Ontario woman suffered a possibly broken foot in one of two multi-car weekend accidents here.

Police reported that the victim's small auto was struck at Reservoir Street and Phillips Boulevard when a second motorist, Raymond K. Ast, 23, failed to stop for a stop sign. The woman's car was spun into a third car, driven by Timothy W. Phillips, 19, of 13241 Pipeline Ave., Chino. Neither Phillips nor Ast, of 3943 E. Ninth St., was hurt, and the woman, Carol Ann Maciel, 29, of 1445 E. Belmont Ave., was reported in good condition today at Pomona Valley Community Hospital.

Three persons were hurt in a three-car crash Saturday night at Holt Avenue east of Reservoir Street. Drivers were Marvin Harris, 45, of 226 Celia St.; Gary R. King, 33, 947 Cienega Ave., San Dimas; and Judith Ann Botrell, 23, West Covina.

David A. King, 12, and Stacy L. King, 8, each had minor injuries. The West Covina woman complained of a neck injury but declined medical attention.

Police said that Harris hit the rear of King's car, knocking it into the third auto.

L.V. general plan is due for action

LA VERNE — The City Council will begin taking action tonight on its proposed general plan of growth which has been the subject of public hearings and discussions since last July.

Tonight's discussion will be restricted to those parcels which lie north of Foothill Boulevard. Separate dates for consideration have been set in December for the area southwest of Foothill and B Street, and for parcels southeast of Foothill and B Street.

Although the public will not participate in the discussions, since the public hearings have now been closed, interested parties have been invited to hear the council deliberations.

The general plan, required by law, when adopted will serve as a blue print for balanced growth not only within the city but the surrounding areas. It will concern itself with the use of land, with environemental impact, schools, parks, traffic flow, motifs and other things.

It is a revision of a plan adopted 10 years ago.

The council also will consider introduction of an ordinance that would set up a franchise for conducting a cable television service in the city.

The ordinance is the result of a request by International Cable TV of Glendora, the present operators, who seek to strengthen their position through such a contract.

Opening the operation to bidding through a franchise also has been requested by residents who subscribe to the service. They claim the service they have received during the past two years has not been satisfactory.

The Humane Society of Pomona Valley, which seeks an increase in impound fees, also will get a second look from the council tonight.

The increases are requested by the organization to offset the rising cost of operation.

Bruce Richards, director of the Humane Society, told the council last month that the higher fees would enable his organization to improve his service to a point where 80 per cent of the city's dog problem would be abated.

Rain-wet road blamed for crash; 6 hurt

ONTARIO — A Guasti man, a La Verne woman and her four young children were injured Sunday afternoon in a two-car rear-end traffic collision on rainslick A Street near Archibald Avenue about 4:22 p.m. Sunday.

The six injured in the traffic collision were taken to the the San Bernardino County Hospital for emergency treatment, according to police reports.

Ricardo Enriques, 24, of 25200 Turner Ave., Guasti, driver of one of the vehicles, was admitted to the county hospital for multiple injuries while five passengers in his car including Mrs. Abigal Munoz, 32, of 1839 Walnut St., La Verne and her four children, Nancy, 8, Bertha, 5, Victor 7, and Jesus, 6, were treated for minor injuries and later released.

Doctors reported that Enriques was in satisfactory condition this morning.

Police reported that the two cars collided on A Street when one slowed for a water-filled dip on the highway.

Car rolls over, driver escapes

CHINO — Cars driven by Johanna Peet, 18, of Torrance, and Joe H. Garrett, 34, of 1029 E. Jefferson St., Ontario, collided at Euclid and Chino avenues Saturday night, slightly injuring Miss Peet.

She said she would see her own doctor.

When care means everything

Rose Hills is more than a mortuary. It is people. People who care... who understand the problems and needs of their fellow man when care and understanding really matter.

Rose Hills people cared enough more than a half century ago to create the world's most naturally beautiful memorial park.

Those same people have cared enough over those past years to endow Rose Hills with every needed service. In addition to the mortuary in the cemetery, there are chapels, flower shops, mausoleums and crematory...all at one convenient location.

Rose Hills people cared yesterday. And they will care tomorrow. Because they are dedicated to constant care. As long as there are people who care...there will be Rose Hills.

'Scoop' Jackson in thick of Congressional action

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Pick the year's nottest battles in Congress and you'll find Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., figures prominently in all of them.

Energy, defense spending, the environment, trade, U.S. troop strength —Scoop Jackson has held stage-center in the Senate on all of these issues and spearheaded most of them.

The 1972 Democratic presidential candidate was recently named the Senate's "most effective" member in a poll of legislative assistants. A look at the legislation in which Jackson has been involved successfully explains why.

As chairman of the Interior Committee, Jackson:

—Shaped and steered to final approval the trans-Alaska oil pipeline bill.

—Sponsored and managed legislation to require mandatory fuel allocations.

—Introduced an emergency energy consumption measure three weeks before President Nixon's call for action along much the samelines.

—Offered a bill to authorize $20 billion for new energy research and development.

Jackson sponsored an amendment to this year's major trade bill, providing that the United States would withhold favorable trade terms from the Soviet Union as long as Soviet Jews were blocked from freely emigrating to other countries.

Now with sponsors in the Senate, the amendment is one of the pivotal issues in the entire debate over future U.S. trade policy.

Jackson's knowledge of defense matters is widely respected by both Republicans and Democrats.

He led —and won —a fight last September against defense critics to retain funds for accelerated development of the Trident nuclear submarine. This was a crucial fight in the year's defense spending battle.

Added to that bill was a Jackson amendment to reduce U.S. troops in Europe by 10 per cent over two years if European countries did not correct the U.S. balance of payments deficit through the purchase of American arms.

Jackson steered through the Senate two of this year's most significant environmental protection bills —one governing surface mining, the other regulating land use.

Through all this activity Jackson has also conducted three major inquiries by the Senate Permanent Investigations Subcommittee which he also heads, into the $1 billion sale of U.S. grains to Russia in 1972, the stolen securities racket, and the oil shortage.

He has demanded that the Justice Department take a new look into the wheat deal on grounds of possible irregularities.

A close ally of Robert Strauss, Jackson had much to do with Strauss' selection as new Democratic national chairman after the 1972 elections, and has been a leading Strauss strategist in party affairs.

Jackson in recent months has become a sought-after speaker at party fund-raisers, fulfilling speaking engagements almost every weekend, from Honolulu to Chicago.

Earlier this year he addressed 7,000 party faithful at a Cook County dinner where Chicago Mayor Richard Daley said of Jackson: "God willing, he'll be President."

Jackson is said to be keeping his options open for another try for his party's nomination in 1976, and an aide said he seemed "pleased" by Daley's unsolicited remarks.

Rattles & straws

The face is familiar

By JOSEPH FIRMAN

It is a well-known fact among my small but rapidly dwindling coterie of friends that I have difficulty in remembering their children. A less well-known fact is that I have difficulty in remembering my OWN children.

After an interlude of six months, you encounter the Blakes at a party.

"How's little Betsy?" you ask Mama Blake. "I haven't seen her in—"

"It's Lucy," says Ms. Blake coldly. "she's fine. Going to Oberlin. And she's taken up horseback riding. Goes out every morning and etc."

Later at the same party you run into Sally Smathers.

"Well, Sally," you say (if you remember her name). "Long time no see. How's Lucy getting on at Oberlin?"

"If you mean my Charlotte," says Sally, nibbling an olive, "she's doing fine at UCLA. She was elected song leader, and she's etc."

(The "etc" stands for a half-hour monologue by a proud mother. Even if you didn't remember the kid's name, you're going to hear more about her than you want to.)

Wandering through the gay throng—sorry, happy throng—you encounter Marcia Chambers.

"Well, Marcia darling, how are you? Long time no see. How's Charlotte getting on with her horseback riding?"

Marcia sighs. "Dear, Charlotte is my 80-year-old aunt. She'd faint if she saw a horse. If you mean my daughter, Janet, she's working at Kline's on the Square in New York City."

"She left Oberlin? I mean USLA? Did she—"

"She graduated from Smith two years ago. Since then she and Jack have broken up and etc."

After a few more cheese dips and a rum punch or two, you corner Bill Hitchcock, whom you haven't seen in a year.

"Well, how's it going, Bill?" you ask. "Long time no see. chuck still knocking 'em dead at Cal State Fullerton?"

"You're thinking of Tim," he replies. "Cal State Irvine."

"That's right! Elected song leader, wasn't he? How—"

"Tim is wide receiver on the football team. Last week he caught two—"

"Is his brother, Jimmy, on the team, too?"

"That's Fred—graduated from Occidental four years ago and has two kids who etc."

(Husbands are just as bad as wives; grandparents are the worst of all.)

The safest thing to do at these long-time-no-see reunions, I have found, is to launch the conversation with "Hya, darling, how are the kids?" They'll take it from there.

Reagan scores N. Viets over prisoner issue

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Gov. Ronald Reagan has criticized the North Vietnamese for "not cooperating" in returning all the American prisoners of the Vietnam war.

The governor also chided Congress for not putting strong pressure on the Vietnamese to "follow through on the deal" to return about 1,200 POWs and other men still missing from the Indochina War.

His remarks came Tuesday when he was presented a black-and-white banner honoring him for his efforts seeking return of the prisoners. It was given to him by Mrs. James J. Evans of Alameda, Calif., whose husband has been missing in Laos since 1965 when his Navy plane was shot down.

Mrs. Evans said the ceremony was part of a drive this month to win public support for the return of about 160 POWs and MIAs from California and another 1,040 residents of other states.

"The enemy over there is not cooperating as we thought they would," Reagan said.

At least John Volpe's

Ambassador's life a hectic one

ROME (UPI) — John Volpe's Italian chef doesn't understand him.

"Sometimes all I want for supper is a bowl of soup," the American ambassador said. "I have trouble convincing the cook I don't want anything else."

In a country where heavy meals and a siesta are the norms, Volpe watches what he eats and "can count on one hand the number of siestas I've had" since he took up the post nine months ago.

Volpe's working day—that's every day with as much of Sunday as possible devoted to family activities—begins at 6:30 or 6:45 with glasses of orange juice, prune juice and water and his one cup of coffee of the day.

A bit of protein food, like ham, is followed by 12 to 15 minutes on an exercycle in front of an open window.

"It combines the benefits of rowing, bicycling and horseback riding," Volpe said.

The exercises, which Volpe has done seven days a week for the past 18 years, continue with stomach and back exercises while flat on the floor and stretching exercises from the top of a bookcase.

Then it's a hot whirlpool bath, a glass of warm milk and off to the embassy to read cables and confer with ministers.

Appointments start about 10:30 a.m. and "you have to try not to exhaust yourself," Volpe said. "Two hundred persons from Massachusetts were in Rome this past week and they all wanted to stop by and see their former governor."

More briefings are followed by lunch at 1:30 p.m., which is usually a business affair lasting through the siesta. At 4 p.m. Volpe is back at his desk and at 5:30 has a snack of cranberry juice, crackers and cheese.

Supper is at 7 p.m. if the Volpes are dining alone, 8 p.m. or later if they have guests.

SOUNDING OFF? — Lee Taylor, 39, holder of the world speedboat record of 285.213 miles per hour, stands before a mockup of the jet-powered craft in which he hopes to become the first man to break the sound barrier (740-760 mph) on water. Project will cost $1.5 million and the craft is to be completed by next October. He will attempt the record run on Lake Tahoe several months later.

Vandals steal strychnine pills

LANCASTER, Calif. (UPI) — Vandals, apparently teenagers, who broke into a cemetery stole more than four pounds of deadly strychnine pills, perhaps thinking they were narcotics, sheriff's officers said Tuesday night.

"The pills are extremely dangerous and will cause death," the County Health Department warned.

The sheriff's department appealed for information from anyone that would help in recovery of the pills, and said adults in the area should warn their children and teenagers against any "turquoise colored pills."

They were taken by vandals who broke into the Joshua Memorial Park Sunday night and wrote obscenities on tombstones and mausoleums with spray paint cans. The theft of the pills was not discovered until Tuesday.

The pills are used by cemetery keepers to poison gophers.

But U.S., Peking holding both ends

Taiwan prospers walking tightrope

By PHIL NEWSOM
UPI Foreign News Analyst

The United States is the only major nation still maintaining diplomatic relations with Nationalist China on Taiwan.

The only European nation still maintaining an embassy there is Portugal.

Among Nationalist Chinese it generally is accepted that some day the United States and Communist China will establish diplomatic relations, thus virtually completing the Chiang Kaishek government's isolation. They would not have been too surprised if Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger had announced a move in that direction after his latest visit to Peking.

Since President Nixon's visit to mainland China in 1971, the Nationalists have had to absorb many blows, among them ouster from the United Nations and a steady succession of nations withdrawing their recognition from Taipei and giving it to Peking.

The most important of these was Japan last year.

What makes it possible for the Nationalists to accept these events with calm is Taiwan's continuing phenomenal economic growth, the highest in the world without accompanying dangerous inflation. Her economic growth for 1973 may reach 12 per cent, with the cost of living increasing only about three per cent.

Her favorable balance of trade in 1972 came to nearly $500 million out of total foreign trade of about $5.5 billion.

She is ninth in the list of U.S. trading partners and moving up rapidly.

American investment in Taiwan is estimated at around $300 million with more coming in.

Three American banks opened offices there last year and more are on the way.

Both General Motors and Ford have heavy and increasing investments there along with other companies in petrochemicals and electronics.

Nationalist China's chief worries continue to be in the future.

The Chinese are disturbed by the gradual reduction of U.S. forces stationed on Taiwan and they realize their future depends in great degree on a continuing benevelent attitude on the part of the Peking government.

Fast neutron beams being used on cancer patients

SEATTLE, Wash. (UPI) — Fast neutron beams are being used at the University of Washington Health Science Center to treat patients with certain types of cancer.

Dr. Robert G. Parker, professor of radiology and head of the Division of Radiation Oncology in the university's school of medicine, said only five patients are currently being treated, but within a couple of months that number is expected to be doubled.

Parker, who with his associates sees upwards of 1,000 cancer patients a year, said those who receive fast neutron beam therapy will be carefully selected from this group.

The radiation is effective only when aimed at localized tumors. He said it would not be effective on cancers which are known to have spread widely throughout the body.

Patients who have cancers which are known to respond well to conventional radiation treatment probably will not be chosen, he said.

Parker is coordinating his project within a team comprising medical physicists, nuclear physicists and radio biologists and physicians. The work is supported by a $1.2 million grant from the National Cancer Institute.

The experimental treatment is being tested at only three other places in the world—M.D. Anderson Hospital in Houston, the Naval Research Laboratory in Washington, and Hammersmith Hospital in London.

Fast neutron beam therapy is one form of radiation treatment which may be better than conventional therapy for some cancers because its effectiveness does not require that the target tumors be well oxygenized.

Cobalt and x-ray treatment are maximally effective on tumors with plentiful oxygen supplies. Tumors, however, outgrow their oxygen supplies and may become more resistent to this conventional type of radiation treatment.

Some tumors, such as those in the mouth, cervix, bladder, brain or breast may be poorly oxygenated. These might be especially susceptible to fast neutron beam therapy.

Most scientists involved in the study believe that fast neutron beams do more damage than conventional radiation treatment to the tumor cells' repair and recovery process.

The fast neutron beam is produced in a cyclotron on the university campus. The neutrons, which are atomic particles with no charge, are split off from deuterium, heavy water-atoms in the cyclotron, and shot off in a quick stream into the tumor.

A team of seven physicists, four of them working full time, has spent most of the last two years converting the cyclotron and the room for patients who will be treated by this method.

Fast neutron beam therapy was used as long ago as 1938, four years after neutrons were discovered, but the technique was not refined and physicians had no way of determining the amount of radiation they were giving their patients. The treatment finally was discarded until about 10 years ago when researchers in England resumed the experiments and found a way to control the dosage.

The doctor comments

Wrong kind of diet can cause problems

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I've been putting off writing this letter for some time now out of fear. I'm afraid of what might be wrong with me.

The problem is much too complicated to explain in detail, but I am a girl, almost 18. Recently I dieted and lost 20 to 25 pounds on my own. I paid attention to nutrition and proper exercise, but I wasn't under medical supervision. I have absolutely no idea if the loss of weight has anything to do with my problem, but I'd like it known that I have been on a diet while this was happening.

I haven't had my menstrual period for over six months (I'm not pregnant). I've become irritable, tired, depressed and my legs and soles of my feet hurt so much sometimes I can barely walk. I don't know what is wrong.

I've not mentioned this to anyone yet. Right now I just want to know what to do. If I were 45 years old, I might believe I was going through the menopause, but I'm only 17, so I'm worried that is might be a disease or possibly a type of cancer. I'm terrified, doctor. Please, please write and tell me what is wrong. I'm so scared and worried I can't sleep half the time, and I feel like crying or something.

DEAR READER — You are pretty good at making a diagnosis. Probably most of your problems are related to that do-it-yourself diet program you have been on. There are a lot of problems caused by dieting. I'm one of the strongest proponents for staying slim and preventing obesity, but not by measures that can and will destroy your health.

The longer I write this column and see people, the more convinced I am that most of the public hasn't the foggiest idea of how much trouble they can cause themselves with ill-advised diet programs. Unfortunately some of these programs are advised on a nationwide scale.

In 1950 Dr. Ancel Keys and his group at the University of Minnesota studied young, healthy people by putting them on a 1600 calorie diet. They lost weight and lost their sexual desire, in some their hair fell out. There were personality changes, very much like you now describe. Almost all seemed withdrawn, irritable and old before their time.

That is only the beginning. It took six months for most of them to regain their health, after starting on a high calorie diet and rehabilitation program. Mind you, all of these problems occurred while eating 1600 calories a day of a pretty good diet, no doubt much better than the one you have been on.

Those sore feet may well mean a vitamin deficiency. And, semi-starvation can lead to stopping menstruation.

The first thing I would advise is that you begin at once to eat a good nutritious diet, in accordance with your appetite. Then see a doctor to be sure you don't have any other problems. I would think, though, that with a good, sound, nutrition program directed toward regaining your health, plenty of vitamins, and protein that you could regain your old zest for living in a few months. I hope your letter reminds many others that food is the source of your energy and health.

Stein sees stronger dollar over hike in energy prices

BONN (UPI) — Herbert Stein, chairman of President Nixon's Council of Economic Advisers, said that the world oil shortage will drive U.S. energy prices sharply upward next year but will also strengthen the dollar in world markets.

Stein said the U.S. government would probably control scarce energy resources more by allowing prices to rise than by "administrative methods" such as rationing, but that decision remained open.

Stein, addressing a meeting of West German economists and business leaders, painted a bright picture of immediate prospects for the U.S. ecnonomy—rising purchasing power for the dollar at home and abroad with inflation easing and devaluation partially reversing itself.

He said the real impact of recent inflation and devaluation upon the dollar had been exaggerated by "the hysterical reporting of our economic situation by some of our leading news commentators."

Discussing the effects of the oil shortage, Stein said, "If the embargo continues, the equiliburium price of oil in the United States in 1974 will be not only much higher than the present price but also higher than the 1980 price—because we have not yet taken the steps to achieve our independence (from foreign energy sources)."

Stepping out while on top

Flip: he knows when to get off

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) —Flip Wilson is one comedian who knows when to get off, so he is leaving his weekly NBC comedy-variety show after this season.

Of course, the fact that "The Waltons" has knocked him kicking in the ratings must be considered a factor.

But Flip thinks he is stepping out while he's on top.

"I wasn't planning to keep this show on the air forever," he said during a rehearsal break. "I wanted to establish a caliber of perfection and lay a foundation for a career that would last a long time.

"When I first discussed the series with the network I agreed to do the show for five years, but after the second year I told them that if I got tired we could renegotiate."

Flip got tired. The show will succumb after only four years.

"I've been working so hard I haven't seen a movie in four years," Flip said. "And I have all my kids with me now and want to give more time to them."

Wilson is a private man who doesn't say how many offspring he has.

"I'm 39 years old and I'm easing off," he said. "It's possible to burn yourself out on the tube. It's a tremendous strain.

"Trouble with comedians is they don't know when to get off. Some of the older comedians were around for years before television came along. They didn't get their chance at it until they were in their 40s or 50s.

"I'm different. I want the whole cookie while I'm young and have my health. My kids can open up a whole new world for me.

"I never started the television show for money. But now that I think of it no motion picture could pay me what I earn on TV. If I got lucky in a movie maybe 10 million people would see it. On television I'm seen by 40 million viewers in one night."

Wilson is not thinking about retirement. He has his sights on movies despite the smaller audience.

He dismisses all suggestions of playing concerts but hopes to work in Las Vegas and Lake Tahoe night clubs. He also plans to star in five or six television specials a year for NBC.

Little is known about Wilson's private life and his attitude about person matters is one of the few subjects that get him uptight.

"I'm a performer," said Flip. "I deal in professional services. I want the same courtesy reserved for other professionals like doctors and lawyers.

"A doctor doesn't advertise his private life. And he doesn't perform an operation in the street to prove he's a doctor. I don't have to be funny off-camera to prove I'm a comic.

"See, I don't have any ego problem. I do all my fantasy on camera for the biggest audience in the world. That's enough for me. If a comedian runs after an audience hoping to be idolized the viewers will get tired.

"I learned from Elvis Presley and Colonel Parker not to spread myself too thin. That's why I haven't been doing personal appearances and clubs while I've been doing this show.

"And Perry Como taught me a lesson on how to protect your talent and leave a weekly show gracefully. He knew how to handle it."

Wilson works nine months a year putting his television series together. Even before production begins he is busy writing his monologues and adding new characters to his collection of zanies, including Geraldine, The Reverend LeRoy, Freddie Johnson and Marvin Latimore.

"That's almost over now," Flip concluded. "I'm looking ahead."

Timidity of TV show irks one of its stars

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) —In the movie "Bob & Carol & Ted & Alice" all jumped into bed together and made some moves at wife-swapping.

In the television series of the same title the four principals jump into a swimming pool— supposedly in the nude—and discuss urban renewal or other such hilarious and topical subjects.

That's the principal difference between the screen and tube.

At least one of the stars of the new show objects to the timidity. She's Anne Archer who plays Carol.

"The original concept of the movie would never go on television," she sniffed. "In the beginning the show was going to be sophisticated, adult comedy, slick and a little bit daring.

Anne is very large on social comment and not too thrilled with the series and what she is doing on it.

Anne is the daughter of actress Marjorie Lord who played Danny Thomas' wife for seven years on the comedian's show. According to Anne, her mother wasn't all that crazy about being Danny's helpmate in a sitcom either.

"Mother is still identified as Danny's wife," said the daughter. "It's been a hindrance to her ever since. She can do a lot of other things but she has to live down that image.

"I'm never identified as Marjorie Lord's daughter. I've always got my parts by auditioning. Producers and the rest of the cast aren't aware who my mother is until I tell them—after I get the role."

Despite her mother's disaffection for wifely roles in sitcoms Marjorie did not discourage Anne from becoming an actress in a series.

"Mother is my biggest fan and believes in me," Anne said. "She went through the same problems I'm having. And she helps me find a greater reality in comedy."

This is not Anne's first acting experience. She costarred with Jon Voight in "The All American Boy" three years ago. She seems undeterred by the fact the picture is such a mess it has never been released.

"It's probably too artistic," said Anne, who is as devoted to art as she is to social comment. "I understand they've changed it all around and it may be released in art theaters sometime soon."

Anne is Mrs. William Davis, wife of a Beverly Hills businessman. She has hazel eyes, dark brown hair and a slender figure. She is also beautiful and well educated.

"Mother wanted me to get a college degree before I became an actress," Anne said. "Maybe if I had been brought up in a family where show business was treated as a joke I wouldn't have gone into it. But I was taught acting is a wonderful gift."

Down deep, Anne doesn't think she has much opportunity to display her gifts in "Bob & Carol & Ted & Alice."

Turkey shares its favorite recipes

Hande Surmelioglu, deputy director of the Turkish Tourism and Information office in New York City, enjoys introducing Americans to the interesting foods of her homeland. She shares some of her favorite recipes (adapted for American tastes) for those who are at wits' end for something different to serve during the many days and nights of holiday entertaining.

CACIK

1 cucumber, pared and coarsely grated
½ teaspoon salt
1 small clove garlic, crushed
2 teaspoons vinegar
2 containers (9 ounces each) plain yogurt
2 tablespoons chopped fresh mint, or 1 tablespoon dried mint
2 tablespoons olive oil
1 cup crushed ice

Grate cucumber into small bowl and sprinkle with salt. Let stand for 10 minutes; drain. In medium bowl, mix cucumber, garlic, vinegar, yogurt, mint and oil. Chill. Add crushed ice just before serving. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

TUNA APPETIZER BALLS

2 cans (6½ or 7 ounces each) tuna in vegetable oil
4 slices white bread, finely crumbled
2 eggs
2 tablespoons sliced scallions
3 tablespoons chopped pignolia nuts
2 tablespoons currants
2 tablespoons chopped fresh dill, or 1 tablespoon dried dill weed
½ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon allspice
¼ cup flour
1 cup salad oil

Drain tuna and flake finely in medium bowl. Add bread crumbs, eggs, scallions, nuts, currants, dill, salt and allspice. Mix well. Form into small balls, about 1 tablespoon each. Chill for 30 minutes. Coat balls with flour. Heat oil in large skillet. Add balls and fry until golden brown. Drain well and keep warm in chafing dish over canned heat. Makes 18 appetizer servings.

PORTAKEL PELTESI
Orange and Grapefruit Pudding

1-½ cups sugar
½ cup cornstarch
2 cups orange juice
2 cups grapefruit juice
1 cup water
4 oranges, sectioned*
2 grapefruit, sectioned*
1 cup slivered almonds

In medium saucepan mix sugar and cornstarch. Stir in orange and grapefruit juices and water. Cook, stirring constantly, over medium heat until mixture thickens and comes to a boil. Simmer 1 minute; remove from heat. Add orange and grapefruit sections and almonds. Pour into individual glasses or into a large bowl. Chill until set. Makes 8 servings.

*To section oranges and grapefruit, cut slice from top, then cut off peel in strips from top to bottom, cutting deep enough to remove white membrane, then cut slice from bottom. Or cut off peel round and round spiral fashion. Go over fruit again, removing any remaining white mebrane. Cut along side of each dividing membrane from outside to middle of core, remove section by section over bowl to retain juice from fruit.

TARATOR
(Nut Sauce)

1 cups shelled walnuts or hazelnuts
1 cup soft fresh white or rye bread crumbs (crusts removed)
1 tablespoon finely minced garlic
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon cayenne pepper
¼ teaspoon paprika
¼ to ½ teaspoon Tabasco pepper sauce
¼ cup olive oil
1-3rd cup red wine vinegar
3 tablespoons mayonnaise
½ cup water

Grind nuts in electric blender. In medium bowl mix nuts, bread crumbs, garlic, salt, cayenne, paprika and pepper sauce. Add oil and vinegar and mix until liquid is absorbed. Stir in mayonnaise and water. Beat until smooth. Chill. Sprinkle with paprika. Serve as dip with raw cauliflowerets. Makes 3 cups.

Questions and answers about rice

What is brown rice?

Grains which have passed through the first stage of the milling process. Only the hull and a small amount of the bran layer have been removed, leaving rice that appears light tan in color. Many valuable nutrients are contained in the bran layer and with this coating on, the rice has a nut-like flavor and a chewy texture.

What is "parboiled" rice?

If the package says parboiled it means that before milling, the rice grains with the hull and bran layer still on have gone through a steaming process. After milling, the rice has a golden and slightly translucent appearance. Then when it is cooked the grains are firm and separate because the earlier steaming process has partially cooked the starch. Parboiled rice takes a little longer to cook than regular rice, and requires more liquid.

Is "precooked" rice the same as parboiled?

No. Unfortunately, the terminology is similar. Precooked rice has been completely cooked; then dehydrated. It can be prepared quickly because you only have to replace the water that was removed. Brown rice, parboiled rice, and regular rice may all be purchased in a "precooked" form.

What other kinds of rice are there?

By far the largest volume of rice sold in the United States is called "regular milled white rice" by the industry. On the package on the supermarket shelf, it says merely "long grain white rice" or "medium grain white rice." This is the most economical kind of rice . . . a half cup serving of cooked rice costs 2 to 3 cents.

Is long grain rice similar to short grain rice?

Not at all. Generally speaking, the shorter the grain, the more the cooked grains tend to cling together. This has advantages in puddings, molds, or croquettes . . . or when eating rice with chopsticks! The long grain rice cooks up into fluffy and separate grains.

Isn't rice fattening?

Not really . . . cooked rice contains 82 calories per half cup. It's low in fat, too. Many weight control diets include rice because it is satisfying, yet adds fewer calories per serving than many other foods in the diet.

Why do some people rinse rice before or after cooking?

That custom started when rice was harvested by hand and contained stones, twigs, and other inedible material that really needed to be rinsed away. However, the rice consumed in the United States has been grown here . . . and is planted, harvested, and packaged by the most automated system in the world. From the time it's planted until it gets into the carton, the rice isn't touched by human hands. Rinsing merely removes valuable vitamins and minerals.

What is the best way to cook rice?

Follow the package directions carefully. Use exact amounts of water and rice and proper cooking time. Do not drain or rinse. A bit of butter added before cooking helps to keep the grain separate.

Taking the entree to the party? Here's a winner

If you really want to be a huge success the next time you are invited to a bring-the-meal party, volunteer to make the entree. And then use this recipe for Glazed Chicken and Vegetables with Rice.

Golden chicken pieces are cooked with colorful carrots, celery, onion, green pepper and tomatoes. When seasoned with garlic, thyme and bay leaves the flavor is distinctive. The final glamorous touch comes from the glistening sauce . . easily accomplished by thickening the juices with cornstarch.

There's just the right amount of the sparkling gravy to make it a nice dish to serve over rice. Rice is good to serve with juicy entrees, for its bland flavor does not distract from the seasonings of the main dish. And the grains absorb the flavorful juices of the dish, making them go further.

Rice and chicken are a perfect pair. Chicken is one of the more economical types of meat, and rice is really economical, too, costing just 2½ to 3 cents per half-cup serving. Hungry guests can have a first serving of chicken and rice. Then the vegetables and gravy over rice make a tasty — and satisfying — second helping. So you may want to make extra rice to take with you.

GLAZED CHICKEN AND VEGETABLES WITH RICE

1 broiler fryer (about 2½ pounds), cut in serving pieces
Salt and pepper
2 tablespoons butter or margarine
1 large onion, cut in eighths
1 cup celery, cut in 1 inch pieces
1 cup carrots, cut in 2 inch pieces
½ large green pepper, cut in 1 inch cubes
1 clove garlic, crushed
½ teaspoon thyme
2 teaspoons salt
Dash of cayenne pepper
1 bay leaf
1½ tablespoons cornstarch
3 cups hot cooked rice

Season chicken pieces with salt and pepper. Brown on all sides with butter. Add onion, celery, carrots, green pepper, tomatoes and seasonings. Bring to a boil cover, and simmer for 30 to 40 minutes or until chicken is tender. Blend a little water into the cornstarch. Stir into chicken-vegetable mixture. Cook about two minutes longer. Remove bay leaf. Serve over beds of fluffy rice. Makes 6 servings.

If dish is to be held 1 hour or longer before serving, turn chicken mixture and rice into separate containers. Cover and place in a 150-degree oven for 1 to 3 hours. Or prepare and refrigerate until ready to serve. Reheat.

Here is another economical chicken-rice combination. The touch of Mexico comes from taco sauce that's added before baking.

CHICKEN MEXICALI

½ cup chopped onions
2 tablespoons butter or margarine
2 tablespoons flour
1 cup chicken broth
2-3rds cup evaporated milk or light cream
1 can (7½ ounces) sauce for tacos
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
½ cup each chopped green pepper and celery
2 cups cubed cooked chicken
3 cups cooked rice
1 can (4 ounces) sliced mushrooms, drained
¾ cup grated
1 can (4 ounces)
¾ cup grated Cheddar cheese

If taco sauce is unavailable, use 1-3rd to ½ cup canned tomatoes and green chilis.

Saute onions in butter until tender crisp. Blend in flour. Add broth, milk, sauce for tacos, and seasonings. Cook until smooth and creamy. Stir in green pepper, celery chicken, rice and mushrooms. Spoon into a greased 2-quart casserole; sprinkle with cheese. Bake at 350 degrees for 30 minutes. Makes 6 servings.

If dish is to be held 1 hour or longer before serving, omit baking directions. Cover and place in a 150-degree oven for 1 to 3 hours. Or prepare and refrigerate until ready to serve. Bake, covered, 40 to 45 minutes at 350 degrees.

Onions ideal to spark up winter meals

The Idaho-Oregon sweet Spanish onions are plentiful again, which makes them ideal for a number of economical holiday dishes. Halved and partially hollowed out, onions are good baked. Fill with dollops of butter or margarine, other vegetables, ground meat or bread crumbs and Parmesan cheese. Also include in casseroles for holiday parties.

Another cold-weather treat which makes a welcome party supper dish is an Onion-Tomato Soup. Serve with sandwiches or toasted slices of French bread.

ONION TOMATO SOUP

2 large sweet Spanish onions
3 tablespoons butter
1 cup chopped celery
¼ pound mushrooms, halved
1 (28-ounce) can tomatoes
2 (10½-ounce) cans condensed beef broth
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
teaspoon basil
Chopped parsley
Croutons
Grated Parmesan cheese

Peel and thinly slice onions. Melt butter in large saucepan. Add onions, celery and mushrooms. Cook until vegetables are tender. Add tomatoes, condensed beef broth, salt, pepper and basil.

Cover and simmer for one hour. To serve, sprinkle with chopped parsley. Pass croutons and grated Parmesan cheese. Makes 6 servings.

Protein-rich pudding is easy to make

Meat prices seem to be getting out of reach, but we still need our protein. This is the perfect time for the lowly peanut to come into its own as a provider of nutrients. These little tubers can be eaten in a variety of ways — from roasted whole to the famous peanut butter sandwich.

Now there is something new which the children in particular should enjoy — Chocolate Peanut Butter Pudding. This dessert can be eaten any time of the day and is super-simple to make. Just pour 2 cups of cold milk into a bowl, add ½ cup nutty grind peanut butter and one 4-ounce package of instant chocolate pudding mix. Then beat at medium speed until well mixed (about 1 minute). Pour into individual serving dishes and let chill to set (about 5 minutes) or until ready to serve.

To further enhance its delicious taste, garnish with whipped cream and finely chopped peanuts. You've got dessert for four! You can substitute the smooth grind peanut butter if preferred, and for variety, try other flavors of pudding mix. The recipe blends best using the non-ho- of pudding mix. The recipe blends best using the non-homogenized, natural old-fashioned style peanut butter, which has no additives or pre-

Holiday party treat: matching wines and sausages

This holiday season, you will want your party to be the one that's remembered long after all the holly and tinsel have been put away. Instead of the usual dips and dainty finger food, switch to something that's not only hearty and tasty, but nutritious, too. Treat your guests to a "sampling and sipping" with good, old fashioned sausages and delicate wines.

Surprising as it may seem, over two hundred different kinds of sausage are produced in this country today, according to Union Carbide Corporation's Food Science Institute. You may not have reason to remember them all, but there's an easy guide to keep them straight. They fall into six main types based on how the sausages are prepared. Included are fresh sausage, uncooked smoked sausage, cooked sausage cooked smoked sausage, dry sausage, and cooked meat specialties.

Fresh sausage is made from selected cuts of fresh meat, mainly pork, and must be refrigerated and used within a few days of purchase. Fresh pork sausage, bratwurst Italian sausage and thuringer are examples. These sausages should be thoroughly, but gently, cooked and turned with tongs so as not to lose the flavorful juices.

Uncooked smoked sausage, similar to fresh sausage is prepared from meats that have been cured. Examples include mettwurst, Polish sausage, and smoked country style pork sausage. Thorough cooking is required and refrigeration is a must.

Cooked sausages such as liver sausage, braunschweiger, and blood sausage (blutwurst are usually prepared from fresh uncured meats, although cured meats may occasionally be used. These cooked sausages are ready-to-eat; they should be refrigerated and are best when served cold.

Cooked smoked sausage is also ready-to-eat, but often has a better flavor when heated. Made from fresh meats, then smoked and fully cooked, the most popular types are skinless frankfurters and bologna. All must be refrigerated.

Dry and semi-dry sausages may be smoked or unsmoked, and are prepared by a special curing and drying process. Therefore, even though it is uncooked, it is ready-to -eat. Genoa salami, German salami, cotto salami kosher salami and summer sausage are the most widely used of these sausages. When their outer casing is uncut they may be stored in a cool place, but once the casing is cut, they must be refrigerated and should be used within two weeks.

Cooked meat specialties, often called luncheon meats, are fully cooked and ready-to-serve processed meats. Common varieties include head cheese, honey loaf, old fashion loaf, pickle and pimiento loaf, ham and cheese loaf, and olive loaf. These prepared meat products require refrigeration.

Choose from these many varieties of sausages for your holiday party. Sausage and wine strike a natural harmony, and you may want to capitalize on this fact when you plan your party. Here is a pleasing pairing of wines and sausages:

Fresh sausage, burgundy or chianti; uncooked sausage, claret or burgundy; cooked sausage, rhine wine or sauterne; cooked smoked sausage, chablis, sauterne or rhine wine; dry or semi-dry sausage, burgundy, chianti, or claret; cooked meat specialties, sauterne, rhine wine or chablis.

Red wines are best served at a cool room temperature; white and rose wines should be chilled before serving. As a general rule allow approximately one-quarter bottle of wine per person.

For an attractive table setting, cut the sausages into strips, cubes, triangles and slices. Roll up the sliced lunchmeat and spear with colorful picks.

Place a large basket or wooden bowl on a bed of evergreens surrounded with Christmas candles. Heap the container with a variety of crackers, long crusty French bread and light and dark rye breads for an instant party center piece.

A selection of hard cheeses, along with fresh sweet butter, mustand and other condiments should be within easy reach of your guests.

Arrange your sausage and wine pairings so that partygoers can sip white wines before reds and dry before sweeter varieties. A placard naming each sausage group and wine is a good idea. If you like give each guest a card to make notes or rate his favorite sausage and wine.

With or without this sip and sample setting, you may find any holiday party of sausage, cheese and wine a unique and memorable way to entertain.

Try pancakes with apples and beer

One of the favorite pancake syrups of American Colonial housewives, it's said, was made of beer and brown sugar. Because beer was a kitchen staple in those days, these canny Yankees knew that a bit of beer in the batter also added a lightness and buoyancy to the pancakes themselves. For a wholesome brunch or supper dish add some plentiful apples to your pancake batter.

APPLE PANCAKES

4 eggs
1 tablespoon sugar
1¾ cups sifted enriched flour
1½ cups milk
½ cup beer
Grated rind of 1 lemon
¼ cup salad oil
1 teaspoon salt
2 apples, grated or very finely chopped

Beat eggs with sugar, beat until frothy. Add flour alternately with milk and beer. Stir in lemon rind, oil, salt and apples.

Bake pancakes on a well-seasoned griddle, using about ¼ cup batter for each cake.

Beer pancake syrup

½ cup beer
1½ cups brown sugar
3 tablespoon butter
½ teaspoon cinnamon

Combine all ingredients in saucepan. Bring just to a boil, serve warm.

Marriage form too much for deputy sheriff

CHARLESTON, W. Va. (UPI) — Deputy Sheriff Bill Mahan passed out recently while signing a marriage application in the Kanawha County Clerk's office.

"My nerves just gave out on me," he explained. "I'm very much in love with a wonderful girl, but when I saw that marriage license form I just blacked out."

Mahan, who plans to marry Ann Caldwell, 21, later this month, was treated for head lacerations at a hospital and released.

Happy Thanksgiving

...If law were applied fairly

Realty firms tend to support sign-removal proposal

POMONA — A proposal to forbid realty firms from posting "for sale" signs in front of homes being sold here drew mixed reaction from some local Realtors. They agreed, disagreed and even proposed some modifications to the restruction.

As a means of improving neighborhoods, the Pomona planning staff has suggested the "for sale" signs bearing the name or phone number of a realty company or agent be prohibited. Homeowners, however, would be allowed to display one-square-foot signs on their own property.

Officials said a large number of these realty signs on a street creates an apppearance of instability, making it more difficult to sell any of the homes. This difficulty, they added, may be directly related to the increased number of vacant and abandoned homes within the city.

Dean Murphy, manager of the Red Carpet Realtors office, said he would favor the proposal provided the signs restriction was applied fairly and equally. This could mean a total ban of all signs.

"I feel certain neighborhoods are so saturated that it inhibits our ability to sell homes. In the current situation where everyone tries to get a sign on the front lawn, some people do object.

Murphy said his office does get a certain amount of calls from the "for sale" signs and these have resulted in sales.

Rose Demetriff, broker for the Century 21 DeRose Realty office, said she would not favor such a proposal if it applied only to realty firms and not the homeowners.

"If it is not right for Realtors to have use of the signs, then why allow homeowners to upset a neighborhood with their signs?" she asked. "If the city should abandon the for sale signs for Realtors and homeowners, then I am for this 100 per cent. I believe this should be a team effort. We should all work to keep our neighborhood looking good."

Bob Woolsey, manager of the Herbert Hawkins Realty Co. office, said the real estate signs are more good than they are bad. "I like to see signs. When people have property for sell, it is good to advertise. Signs are for the good and should be maintained."

He said the city might establish a maximum sign size, but added the size now is "kind of good."

"I think this would be a restriction on the Realtors."

Jim Odom, owner of the Jim Odom Realty, said he wouldn't object to some type of sign containment. "There are some areas where there are too many signs." But, he added, these signs do help real estate firms sell homes where they are posted.

"People out looking for a home to buy will see the sign and call the real estate agency."

Odom said some restrictions might be made on the size, height and number of the signs. "But this would have to be a voluntary program. I would encourage the Pomona Valley Board of Realtors to work with the city staff in developing some type of sign program."

The Pomona Planning Commission, which received the city staff report Wednesday night, directed that an amendment to the zoning ordinance be prepared which would ban the signs.

A public hearing will be scheduled within the next four weeks, with Realtors and others invited to give testimony, before planners make a decision on the proposed amendment.

If recommended for approval, the matter would go to the City Council for final action.

Officials estimated there are now 700 vacant homes in Pomona. A similar ordinance restriction has been declared by courts as being valid in Whittier, they added.

Board may offer reward for info on school fires

POMONA — A recommendation that a reward be offered by the school board for information leading to the arrest and conviction of those responsible for the Madison School fires Nov. 10 and 11 will be considered at a special board meeting Tuesday at 7:30 p.m.

Such a reward is being recommended by Supt. Robert E. Wentz, and is in accordance with Government Code Section 53069.5.

Pomona firemen have conducted a week-long investigation into the fires believed started by arsonists which destroyed the school's math and reading resource center, causing an estimated $25,000 damage.

Authorities said a Molotov cocktail was thrown through a center window about 7:30 p.m. Nov. 10. That fire did minor damage.

But 45 minutes after the security guard left the school at 4:30 a.m. Nov. 11, a second fire broke out. It destroyed the center and damaged two adjoining classrooms.

Principal Bruce Shyer said the loss represented three years' work and would affect all children in the school.

Another item on the agenda for the special meeting is a request that the board authorize the expenditure of $245 for a workshop Nov. 27, at Kellogg-West, Cal Poly Pomona for Parents Involved in Community Action.

These parents assist in the district's bilingual programs.

The administration also will ask that Rosa Lopez, president of the group, be employed as a consultant-speaker at the workshop at a fee of $50 maximum.

Board members will consider student explusions and the re-entry of students previously expelled from district schools.

Penalty from bank was communication problem

We certainly would appreciate your advice on how to recover $41.81 that was stolen from us by a bank.

On Jan. 10, we opened a 5 per cent investor's passbook account with a 90-day maturity, knowing that we would need the money for a real estate investment about six months later.

Today my wife went to the branch to withdraw the funds. The teller told her that the bank had converted the account to a 5½ per cent investor's account with a one-year maturity.

Thus, since a year had not yet elapsed, she had to pay a penalty of $41.81 to withdraw the funds.

We certainly would appreciate it if you could advise us how to proceed. Can we sue the local branch for this $41.81? It was never our intention to start a one-year maturity account and we were never informed that our account had been transferred. — R.W., Pomona.

Error, not theft, deprived you of your $41.81, we were told by an assistant vice president of the bank.

The interest rate of 5 per cent was raised to 5½ per cent to give you better earnings. There should not have been an interest penalty since yours was a 90-day account and the money had been in your account for the full 90 days.

The bank returned the $41.81. The error would have been corrected promptly if managers had been aware of the problem at the time it happened, the bank officer said.

After exhaustive, futile efforts to collect from an insurance company for two operations which I had last year, I am hoping you can help me.

The first operation cost $578. Medicare paid $462 of that amount. When I did not hear anything from the insurance company, I wrote and four months after the operation received a card saying records were being checked.

Two months later a letter came saying the company had no record of the claim. The company asked me to send a copy of the explanation of Medicare benefits. I did so immediately.

At the same time I sent a similar document for the second operation. The total cost of that operation was $210 and Medicare paid $168. So far I have received no further word from the company. — F.D., Pomona.

It took us two months to get an answer from the company's public relations representative that a check for $116 had been issued to you for the first operation. A $42 check for the second operation would be forthcoming, you were told.

As it worked out, five weeks elapsed before you got the first check and we had to send a reminder to get the company to send the second one.

I usually am pretty cautious about whatever I do. I've congratulated myself for being among the lucky ones in magazine deals. But right now I'm having problems with Good Housekeeping and am disgusted.

I've been waiting eight months and still haven't received the magazine.

My check cleared the bank a month after the subscription offer came. I wrote to the magazine company twice and received a form letter saying my first issue would reach me soon.

Feeling things had been straightened out, I expected to receive my magazine. A month later I received the same form letter again.

I have written to the company four or five times without obtaining results. If you can get things straightened out and get my magazine to me I'll be very grateful. — Mrs. P.S., Chino.

We did write to the magazine distributor and your subscription began immediately. In fact, the action was so immediate that we think it was your perseverance that brought results.

We've had quite a few complaints about Good Housekeeping subscriptions lately. If they continue, the magazine may lose its Action Line seal of approval.

Army of Cal students begins work on entry for Rose Parade

POMONA — Work is under way on the Cal Polys' 26th annual float entry in the Pasadena Tournament of Roses Parade. The entry depicts the innocence and wonder of a child's imagination.

The overall parade theme, "Happiness is . . . " was further defined by the selection of the university's float theme, "Happiness is Finding a Friend."

In animated sequences, the student-built float portrays the growing friendship between a young girl and a gentle, likeable lady dragon.

Perched atop a tree stump, the small girl pours tea for her new friend as a timid skunk hiding in a hollow log and a boisterous mouse hanging on a dragon's tail display their enthusiastic approval.

Students from the Pomona and San Luis Obispo campuses are responsible for financing, organizing and constructing the float. Tom Andrews, senior mechanical engineering student and chairman of the rose float committee, said up to 200 students will participate in this year's effort.

A colorful assortment of flowers and lush vegetation will decorate the float.

The comical lady dragon will have scales and wings of green leaves accented by silver leaf, a body of lavender mums, an underbelly of yellow calendulas and a large bow of red roses. The dragon will stand in a field of red, yellow, pink and other assorted colored roses, supported on a bed of green ferns.

The innocent little girl will wear a dress of off-white raw cotton with a sash and hat band of red anthuriums. The hat will be made of dry wheat.

Redwood bark, onion seed and moss will cover the stump and log. Toadstools will be covered with finely chopped walnut shells.

For black colors, the float will have onion seed. Gladiola petals, gold dust, carnations, birds of paradise, pampas grass, iris and calendulas will fill out the fantasy scene.

A complex, innovative electronic system will be used for the first time to control the animated sequences.

The float's built-in sound system will play, "You've Got a Friend," continuously throughout the parade route.

The university's float entries in the past have won several major awards, including the princess award for animation, judge's special for most humorous float and the mayor's trophy for the most original float.

JONATHAN HAGAR

Portugal travel film scheduled for forum goers

POMONA — Producer-lecturer Jonathan Hagar will present his color film entitled "Pulse of Portugal" before the Pomona Forum today at 7:45 p.m. in the District Education Center auditorium.

According to Hagar, Portugal is Europe's best travel bargain. "It is a colorful, exotic land and the favorable rate of exchange makes it one of the least expensive countries on the continent."

He and his wife, both former journalists, covered the country and with cameras recorded "the sweep of 2,000 years of history."

They show parts of Portugal which appear to have changed little since it was the Roman province of Lusitania. In Lisbon they span the centuries from the Moorish occupation to the 1970s.

Hagar, a graduate of the University of Missouri School of Journalism, lives in St. Louis, Mo. For 10 years he was picture editor of the newspaper, the Globe-Democrat, in St. Louis.

Relocation of Masonic Temple to be discussed by city unit

POMONA — Proposed relocation of the Masonic Temple, Fourth and Thomas streets, will be discussed at a meeting Tuesday of the Community Redevelopment Commission.

The meeting will be held at 7:30 p.m. in the City Hall boards and commissions room.

The Community Redevelopment Agency is considering asking for appraisals on the Masonic Temple and the Rothrock building next door for possible purchase in connection with the redevelopment master plan.

Reports also will be made at the meeting on other downtown projects, including the Park Avenue Towers condominium, La Villita, a hotel feasibility study and the planned Railroader Restaurant.

Bradbury to talk

POMONA — Author Ray Bradbury will talk about redevelopment in Pomona and Pasadena during radio station KFI's Open Forum program tonight at 8.

Bradbury spoke about redevelopment here Tuesday as part of Pomona Redevelopment Week activiites.

Library to show two documentaries

POMONA — Free showings of two documentary films, "The Spanish Armada," and "Mrs. Dickens of London," are scheduled at the Pomona Public Library's public conference room Nov. 27 at 4 p.m.

The films are part of a monthly series at the library and are furnished by the Los Angeles County Museum of Natural History.

EDITORIAL

Opinion

Decade since JFK is like no other

The decade since the death of President John F. Kennedy has been one of ferment, change and challenge unlike any other in the nation's history.

The ship of state and its 208 million passengers — one out of 10 of them added since 1963 — has been adrift on an endless sea of storms.

True, the Republic has experienced, and survived other periods of great change. But the striking and frustrating thing about the decade of the assassination is that none of its crises or problems ever seems to have been resolved. One merges into the next, ever more rapidly.

The Revolutionary War lasted eight years, but it ended and the nation's independence was a fact. The Civil War ended, and settled for all time the question of whether or not the United States was a single Union.

The Depression years ended, and while it was thanks to the stimulus of the Second World War, that war, too, came to a conclusion in which America's immediate objectives were realized.

But even now, 10 years after that fateful day in Dallas, countless Americans remain convinced that they have never been told the truth about it. All of us, except those who were very young, remember that assassination vividly — not as one remembers other events that are over and done with but as something inexplicable, wholly unreasonable, an event frozen in time and in our national consciousness.

Yet, paradoxically, everything that has happened since then seems to have flowed from the one terrible moment: the racial and social turmoil of the '60s, other assassinations and attempted assassinations of public figures, the revolution in our mores, the Vietnam ordeal. Now, Watergate, and a governmental crisis unparalleled in the country's 194 years.

It is as if November 22, 1963, marked the end of an America that was and the emergence of an American whose character we cannot yet perceive.

Inevitably, we ask ourselves, "What if?" What if John F. Kennedy had lived and served his full term as president, and perhaps another four years? Would the nation have been polarized between dove and hawk, youth and age, white and black? Would confidence in our national leaders have fallen so low as it has in 1973?

Such questions have no answers. For some who try to answer, it may seem almost a betrayal of the slain president's memory — of that America that was and might still be — even to suggest that, however tragic was the cutting short of his young and promising life, much of what has happened in the past 10 years would have happened anyway.

Our entanglement in Vietnam, for example, was a process well begun during the Kennedy administration. Racial unrest had been simmering since at least the Eisenhower era and was bound to come to a boil sooner or later.

For all the Kennedy style and charisma and brilliance, it is doubtful that he could have pushed through the social legislation that Lyndon Johnson did, or have achieved the breakthrough in relations with Russia and China that was Richard Nixon's triumph. Pollution, urban blight, crime — they would be with us.

Nevertheless, we know — it is all we can know — that part of America's soul was also smashed by that assassin's bullet. We mourn still. We grieve. For John Kennedy. For ourselves. For America.

We cannot forget.

Soviets pick up Mideast marbles

The preliminary peace agreement negotiated between Egypt and Israel through the good offices of Secretary of State Henry Kissinger may turn out to be a triumph for American diplomacy. As of now, however, the U.S.S.R. looks like the only gainer from the latest Middle East conflict.

The Soviet Union, claims Aviation Week & Space Technology magazine, "is on the verge of completing a successful power play that will gain all of the Middle Eastern objectives it has sought during the past five years."

Even though Russian-equipped Arab armies failed to defeat Israel on the battlefield, writes editor Robert Hotz, their initial success and the length of the conflict now make it possible for the Soviets to achieve the goals that have constantly eluded them in this area. These include:

— Opening the Suez Canal to the Soviet fleet to provide easy access to its new Indian Ocean base complex where it can sit astride the Persian Gulf tanker routes to Europe, Japan and the United States.

— Mobilizing the Arab oil boycott against Western Europe and demonstrating how control of this oil flow to Europe can be used to impose political policy changes on Western Europe.

— Driving a wedge into NATO between Europe and the United States. Major NATO nations withheld support from the U.S. in its efforts to supply Israel — except for Portugal — even denying landing and fueling rights to U.S. planes on NATO airfields.

— Re-establishing a strong Soviet military presence in the Arab countries from which the Russians had been expelled several years ago. Moscow is again dictating Arab strategy, says the magazine. If this is "detente," bring back the Cold War.

A call for mandatory rationing

WASHINGTON — The joint industry-government National Petroleum Council has called for coupon rationing of gasoline, home and commercial fuel oil to meet what it calls an "emergency" oil shortage.

The council's findings, contained in a 60-page document marked "Confidential . . . guard against premature release," says even the most persuasive voluntary controls on oil use will still leave a huge gap in national needs.

The council's Committee on Emergency Preparedness said that "There now exists a national emergency even though the United States is not at war. Because we are not at war there is difficulty at this time convincing the American people that because of Middle East oil denials or cut-offs" that the oil crisis is already serious and getting worse.

"Since the necessary savings cannot be achieved by voluntary means, rationing seems to be essential," the committee concluded. Some of the report is to be released later this week.

Coupon system

The council insisted that a "coupon rationing system" similar to that used in World War II "should be placed now on theuse of all energy fuels," particularly on gasoline. Home and commercial use of fuel oil will "likely" need the same kind of regulation.

(Although the report does not detail how much gasoline each motorist would be allocated, current thinking is that each car would get no more than 10-15 gallons a week for standard use.)

The report contends that "every effort should be made to continue the operations of the industrial sector of the U.S. economy as close to normal as possible" in order to keep the nation's economy strong, even if it means a cutback for individual users.

Besides the return to coupon sales of gasoline, the report has other drastic recommendations for saving oil-based fuels. While some of the plans would continue to turn profits for oilmen, others are joined in by consumer groups.

Relax air standards

The report recommends, for instance, that air quality standards "could be temporarily relaxed" and "burning of high sulphur coal and fuel oil" be permitted. "The highly complex automobile pollutant reducers. . .should be postponed," the report recommends.

The council aslo recommended that the White House "suspend price controls on home heating oil" to increase "economic incentives," a familiar oil lobby argument for fatter profits.

Similarly, the study asks that Federal Power Commission rules be relaxed to allow natural gas prices to climb. Under the council plans, natural gas, coal and even nuclear energy would be stepped up to handle some of the reduction in petroleum.

The council, however, also asks "both the federal government and industry (to) immediately present the true and difficult facts to the public.

'Easy things'

"Reduced heating, lighting and air conditioning use, reduced highway speeds, regular motor vehicle tune-ups and car pooling are relatively easy things for the American consumer to do, if he chooses, and such measures should be stressed as patriotic participation in this national emergency . . ."

Even with all these steps, the council gloomily predicts a drop in the Gross National Product, the indicator for measuring American economic growth.

Under one estimated oil loss table, the East Coast and Northwest would suffer gross economic drops of about six per cent, the Southwest three per cent, and the Rockies and upper Mid-West little or no reduction.

With a little help from state regulatory bodies, the council found, most of the dramatic steps can be taken under present law. Capitol Hill will have to be called in on some possible measures, perhaps to tap the emergency reserve oil supply under federal jurisdiction at Elk Hills near Bakersfield, Calif.

Mid-East at fault

"The . . . hostilities in the Middle East" have presented an oil situation where "prices have nearly doubled, shipments were disrupted, productions were cut back and embargos were enacted.

"The net effect upon U.S. petroleum supply is estimated. . .to reach three million barrels per day, or 17 per cent of the 1973 domestic demand for petroleum products."

The United States, therefore, must "implement a national program to increase supplies and reduce energy consumption on an emergency basis."

The report, requested by the Interior Department, is a major plank in the Administration's effort to hammer out an emergency fuel action program.

OUR MAN IN WASHINGTON

America still world's greatest

By RICK GOTCHER
P-B Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Sometimes we don't see so good because the obvious is clouded by the ridiculous.

America is still the world's great nation! Flat-out, hands-down, this country of ours is the world's crowning achievement in the struggle to equate human dignity with national prerogatives.

Elements of the government occasionally go astray, as in the Watergate mess. But these escapades are the foibles of men and don't but obscure the essential greatness of the nation.

America purges itself with action. For every tragedy or debacle in our history there has been a corresponding surge to cleanse, mend and heal. That is the vitality quotient of a young, vibrant country. And that is the reason Watergate is only a delay, not a total collapse, as some would picture it.

It is in international affairs that the quality of our greatness is most quickly seen.

Allies and foes, alike, were lifted from the debris of war by American dollars and aid. Billions were spent — and not even the interest is being paid on those debts.

In 1956, the French franc nearly collapsed. America propped it up and kept the country from bankruptcy.

Recently French interests have been chortling, while abetting, the decline of the dollar.

Railroads in France, Germany and India were decrepit. We rebuilt them.

Our own railroads stand in severe financial straits. No one even offers to send an aspirin to ease the headache.

Thousand of times America has raced to combat the ravages of natural or man-made disasters in other countries.

Not once has a foreign entity set foot on our shores to offer aid, of any kind, since the days of the American Revolution.

And here we are now, in the throes of a leadership crisis unparalleled in our history, forced to take a massive dose of international criticism and pious advice.

We have become to militaristic, they say. But they scream when it is mildly suggested America reduce some of its overseas military commitments to save money.

We are trying to dominate world situations, they say. Meanwhile, Europe capitulates to Arab blackmail and forbids American planes to land for refueling on the way to Israel.

Doing this, Europe has made itself a once and future victim to whatever pressure the Arabs feel they want to exert for the privilege of buying their oil. It can almost be guaranteed that someday America will be asked to pull European chestnuts from the fire, again.

And finally, we have voted a despot into the White House — make him resign or convict him, they say. This from countries forbidden by law to disclose official wrongdoing — where scandals are sex-related or ignored by the press.

At least we know where our problem is — it's right up front, in full view. We may be ashamed of it, but we can damn well be proud that our system will prevail.

We have been great, we are great, we will be greater. If that sounds a trifle sentimental, fine. It was meant to be.

Diamond Bar busing

Your article last week on PTA attempts to interest the RTD to develop transportation to Ganesha High School for Diamond Bar students was amusing.

I would like to know where the PTA representatives were when the school board voted down the busing proposal. My husband was the only one at the meeting to support the busing. There were about a dozen or more who talked against busing.

We had to buy a car for my daughter and she is now responsible for three other students riding with her on the freeway every morning. I don't like it.

The superintendent of schools announced the buses were ready to go and the money was in the budget. But it still was voted down.

President Nixon talked on saving gasoline the other day. Now, rationing may be voted. We certainly could have helped the situation right here, but no one seemed to care. — Mrs. Camilla Strey, Diamond Bar.

Conserving energy

Recently our President made a speech on the so called "energy crisis". If I could believe there was an energy crisis, I would like to make the following suggestions to our President.

1. If he wants us to voluntarily conserve energy, he should, as our leader, set an example. Like closing down his San Clemente home. Just the fuel alone used flying him and his staff back and forth one trip would be more than I could possibly use in a lifetime. It must use a lot of energy heating and cooling his mansion year round for the two or three weekends he uses it a year.

2. He and his staff, if they are interested in conserving fuel, could drive economy cars like I do. Then I would feel more like conserving even if I don't feel there is an energy crisis.

3. Final suggestion. If he really wants to conserve, he could shut down his Biscayne Florida home and live in one house the way I do. — Victor T. Reid, Claremont.

Gossip for today

Things you never wanted to know but were always afraid someone would insist on telling you. — Today I insist!

Some sinners are mighty particular about the company they keep. A pornographic film producer recently bought a full page ad so that the announcement of his porno epic wouldn't have to appear in the newspaper's X-rated segregated section where all the naughty movie ads are lumped together.

If you are curious about how the upper crust lives, you'll be interested in a columnist's horrified announcement that Nelson Rockefeller often wears a rumpled suit two days in a row.

You will also be thrilled to learn that one of the latest American inventions is a fresh-flower-odor spray for artificial flowers.

INSIDE REPORT

King retains oil stranglehold

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

RIYADH, Saudi Arabia — The exotic meeting in the Red Palace here between the King of the Arabs, surrounded by his Bedouin chieftans, and the German-born American Jew, a scene of contrast and irony, was a dramatic climax — but what followed raised staggering problems.

Secretary of State Henry Kissinger emerged from his two-hour private talk reinforced in all his intuitions: austere King Faisal of Saudi Arabia will not "restore his faith" in the United States until Israel actually withdraws from occupied Arab lands.

For the U.S. — but most particularly for Europe and Japan — those words carried danger. Yet, Henry Kissinger could not shake the King of Saudi Arabia, who crystallized the following points with punctuated brevity (in deep contrast to the shrill rhetoric of some other Arab leaders):

First, he had kept his silence year after year since the Israelis seized the Sinai peninsula, the Golan heights and religious places in East Jerusalem sacred to the leader of Islam.

Second, he had done so in faith that the U.S. would respect its long friendship with the Arabs and persuade Israel to do what two American Presidents had repeatedly promised and the United Nations had ordered after the six-day war of 1967.

Third, his silence had not endeared him to other Arabs. Now he would accept no more promises, even if he himself were willing to take one more chance, which he was not.

Oil increase economic folly

Fourth, the systematic increase in Saudi oil production was economic folly for his country. It could not spend the income and the earned dollars had a precarious future value less than oil in the ground. Yet he had agreed to a production increase to prevent oil famine in the West. All that was before the recent war.

For his part, Kissinger convinced the King that he was facing a "serious" man of genuine "sincerity" unlike, the King later told intimates, some other Americans who had claimed authority but failed to perform.

Kissinger opened his two-hour talk with the man whose possession of oil confers frightening power by saying he had read all the private correspondence between the King and three American Presidents: John Kennedy, Lyndon Johnson and Richard Nixon. From that record, said Kissinger, it was embarrassingly clear that the King had reason to compain.

But President Nixon was now unequivocally committed to Israel withdrawal and he, Kissinger, would not have undertaken the negotiation if not convinced that settlement was possible.

With a familiar display of ego, Kissinger informed the King that he was not in the habit of failing and pointed to his success in negotiating an end to American participation in the Vietnam war after four years of work. The two then agreed that a peace conference, preferably in the U.S., should start before the end of the year.

Proof in the pudding

But on the matter of softening the oil squeeze, a principal reason for his trip here, Kissinger failed to gain assurances on the basis of new American credibility. The King insisted again and again the proof was in the pudding, not in its promise.

This adamant stand was inescapably clear to us when we saw the King later in an exclusive interview. He declined to agree that the visit marked "a turn of the corner" in the breakdown of Saudi Arabia's confidence in the U.S. He said only that Kissinger had impressed him deeply as a man who meant what he said, and that he "hoped" the U.S. was now prepared to deliver. Clearly the King still doubts American willingness to take on Israel. This means that even though Kissinger has now established his own credibility with the King, that is not enough to loosen the tightening oil stranglehold.

This might change if Kissinger could persuade Israel to start a pullback from the Suez Canal and produces agreement on a phased withdrawal.

Otherwise, the absolute monarch, who rules a remote desert kingdom which still follows with astonishing precision the teachings of the prophet Mohammed, may prove to be as immovable in his demands as Israel has been in hers. The result of that could be incalculable chaos in the West, a well-known fact that Washington only very recently has begun to acknowledge.

Berry's world

Car, not plane, pays a bigger share of airport bills

ONTARIO — The major source of revenue at Ontario International Airport doesn't come from the airplanes that land there.

Rather, most money is received from fees charged for vehicle parking plus revenues obtained for the restaurant, bar, insurance counters, vending machines, newsstands and terminal building sales.

And despite the increased passenger traffic, expenditures for the past fiscal year ending June 30 exceeded the airport's income. Officials listed total revenues at $1.6 million, compared to $1.8 million in expenses.

Revenues are listed in two categories: aviation and nonaviation. The aviation income was $923,043 and includes these sources:

—Renting hangars to aircraft service companies and others, $35,994; leasing ground areas to major airlines and manufacturers, $210,054; renting buildings, terminals, shops and storage areas, $123,256; plant and facility rentals, $79,421; landing fees for scheduled and nonscheduled airlines and cargo and freight commuters, $425,809; and field use and gasoline commissions, $57,509.

The nonaviation income sources are:

—Car rentals, buses, limousines and hotel-motel services, $159,605; auto park, restaurant, bar, newsstands, vending machines and other terminal sales, $540,081; work done for others, $14,391; and other uses, $1,193.

Expenditures listed are:

—Maintenance and repair of runways, taxiways, aprons, plants and security in field areas, $230,368; maintenance and repairs for roads, streets, walks, parking lots, landscaping and security in public areas, $121,071; building maintenance, $247,470; and maintenance of ground vehicles, including firefighting equipment, and office equipment, $61,432; costs of sales and services, equipment rented and utilities, $7,997; general operating expenses including insurance $252,997; administrative expenses, including salaries, jury duties and publicity, $368,002; depreciation, $121,286; and interest on bonds, $418,319.

These figures were included in an annual report recently distributed by the Los Angeles Department of Airports, which operates the Ontario airport.

Officials reported the Ontario airport in 1972 recorded its first one millionth passenger year. Western Airlines began a passenger service between Los Angeles, Ontario and Palm Springs in October 1949.

With the recent addition of Eastern Airlines, Ontario is now served by nine carriers and has nearly 3,000 passengers a day go through the terminal building.

Operating income increased 15.7 per cent during the fiscal year, with the major reason being a hike in landing fees plus an increase in car rental and auto parking revenue.

In comparison, operating costs were hiked only 1.1 per cent since increased expenses at all levels were nearly offset by decreases in the cost of police and fire protection.

Officials reviewed completion of an environmental impact report required before a 10,200-foot replacement runway could be built parallel to the existing runway.

The threshhold of the new runway will be extended 2,200 feet to the east. Work will include associated runways. The project will provide adequate facilities for the wide-bodied, quiet jets now unable to use the Ontario airport.

A public hearing must be held on the report, with a transcript of the hearing and copies of the study going to the federal Department of Transportation for review.

Those scheduled and commuter airlines now serving the airport are Air California, American, Continental, Eastern, Golden West, Hughes, PSA, United and Western.

Air Guard zeroes in on fuel crisis

ONTARIO — Air guardsmen here are attacking the current energy crisis on land and in the air.

The Air National Guard based at Ontario International Airport has 20 F102 fighter jets and some 800 personnel in carrying out its air defense mission.

"We are taking what steps we can to help in the energy program," said Lt. Col. Lloyd Hutton, base commander.

On land, energy saving measures include forming employe car pools, switching off lights when not needed, and keeping vehicle speeds under 50 miles an hour.

In the air, there may be a reduction seen in the hours of flights, he noted. "We are looking for ways to improve our mission design and a better utilization of flying hours to save on fuel and energy," he added. "But we do not intend to do anything that would detract from our capability. We intend to keep our capability in every regard."

Hutton said he had called base employes together Friday morning on the energy crisis and outlined various steps that can be taken.

"I am trying to get everyone excited about it. There are a lot of things I can do."

Steady growth for college tax base

ALTA LOMA — The Chaffey College District has experienced steady growth in its tax base during the past four years, according to a recent report to the college by the San Bernardino County auditor-controller's office.

As announced by Dist. President T. Stanley Warburton, the report's figures show the district's assessed valuation has increased steadily since 1970-71. The current figure is $705,067,760 compared to $662,774,720 in 1972-73. Assessment was $617,903,830 in 1971-72 and $570,631,990 in 1970-71.

As a result of the passage of Senate Bill 6, which provided more state support for the college's operations, the district's tax rate has dropped to its lowest point during the period. The current rate of $.5293 is now below the $.5332 rate set in 1970-71.

A similar trend is also evident in the district's bond rate for the period. A declining bonded indebtedness coupled with the increased valuation has dropped the bond rate to $.0368 as compared with the 1970-71 rate of $.0492.

The college's bonded indebtedness—principal and interest on bonds sold to finance construction—was $1.4 million as of June 30. Full redemption of the amount is scheduled for March 15, 1979, Warburton said.

Box company to relocate in Chino

CHINO — The Tressel Box Co. will move shortly into a new 35,000-square-foot building on Walnut Avenue, according to county Supervisor Ruben Ayala. The new site will enable the company to double its volume, an operation which will employ about 30 people.

Don Tressel, president of the company, explained that machines and trained personnel are involved in the various processes of manufacturing boxes of all sizes out of corrugated paper.

The company has existed since 1949. Full operation is expected in early December.

Food services director is appointed at Chino hospital

CHINO — Rod Miranda assumed responsibilities as food services director at Chino General Hospital last week. He will be assisted by new dietician Linda Bandy.

Miranda was hired by John Gaffney, western regional food services director in charge of hospitals for Dobbs House, Inc., and trained at Foothill Presbyterian Hospital in Glendora. Mrs. Bandy was also brought in under the Dobbs House contract signed by American Institutional Developers, owners of Chino General.

The 20-year-old Miranda obtained his associate in arts degree from Riverside City College. He will continue his studies as a business administration major at Cal State Fullerton on a part-time basis.

Miranda resided in Riverside for 11 years before his recent move to Mira Loma. He and Miss Gini Boggs of Riverside will be married in January.

He had been employed at Riverside Community Hospital as a diet aide and food production manager assistant in the dietary department before moving to the job with Gaffney in food services. His official transfer to Chino General was on Nov. 15.

Although Gaffney will continue to act as regional manager of the West End hospital's food services department, Miranda will be in charge of dietary duties there.

Mrs. Bandy comes to Chino in her first employment as a civilian. She served for nearly three years as a therapeutic dietician at Brooke Army Medical Center in Ft. Sam Houston in San Antonio, Tex.

Mrs. Bandy, her husband Carl and their seven-week-old Carl Anthony moved to Riverside four months ago from Texas. Bandy is a sales representative for 14 western sates with Smith-Kline Instruments, a subsidiary of Smith-Kline-French Pharmaceutical Co.

Tape gaps? not according to Butterfield

WASHINGTON (UPI) — There was no talk of machine malfunctions or "gaps" or tape recorders running out of tape when the Senate Watergate committee —and the world — first learned of the existence of President Nixon's Watergate tapes on the afternoon of July 16, 1973.

Instead, the surprise witness who sat before the Select Senate Committee, Alexander P. Butterfield, stressed that the recording procedure and machinery were designed to be foolproof and to capture automatically every word spoken in the White House and the President's working office in the adjacent Executive Office Building (EOB).

"There was no doubt in my mind they were installed to record things for posterity, for the Nixon library," said Butterfield. "The President was very conscious of that kind of thing. We had quite an elaborate setup at the White House for the collection and preservation of documents, and of things which transpired in the way of business of state."

Butterfield, now administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration, was a deputy assistant to the President in charge of administration at the White House until last March 14. He said the listening devices were installed in the spring of 1971.

Here is excerpts from Butterfield's cross - examination, by Fred D. Thompson, the committee's Republican counsel:

Thompson: Where were the tapes of those conversations kept, maintained?

Butterfield: I cannot say where. I am quite sure in the Executive Office Building in some closets or cupboards or files which were maintained by the Technical Security Division of the U.S. Secret Service.

Thompson: Were these tapes checked periodically?

Butterfield: Yes, they were checked at least daily. They were, I think .... some were used more frequently than others. Of course, they were — the Secret Service knew this, they made sure that they were checked periodically and sufficiently.

Thompson: As far as you know, from your own personal knowledge, from 1970 until the present time all of the President's conversations in the offices mentioned and on the telephones mentioned were recorded?

Butterfield: That is correct, until I left. Someone could have taken the equipment out, but until the day I left I am sure I would have been notified.

Thompson: As far as you know, those tapes are still available?

Butterfield: As far as I know, but I have been away four months...

Sam Dash, chief committee counsel: When someone finished speaking would it stop at that point or would there be some lag picked to pick up and answer?

Butterfield: It was explained to me by those who installed the equipment that the equipment allowed for a lag so that no portion of a conversation would be omitted, so if I were talking to you and stopped talking just momentarily the tape would not stop. It would continue for a moment or two so that it would pick up your response if you should respond immediately...

Dash: All right. Now, I am not sure whether you testified to this, but you tested the system at one point, did you not?

Butterfield: Yes sir.

Dash: To see if the Oval Office or the EOB office, that you could pick up sound even though it was hardly audible when a sound was made in the room?

Butterfield: Yes.

Dash: What was the result of your test?

Butterfield: The result was that voices, conversations, were picked up very well, very clearly.

Dash: Even if there was a whisper?

Butterfield: In either in the Oval Office or the Executive Office Building, I can't tell you about a whisper. I just don't know. But it would appear that even low tones were picked up well...

Sen. Joseph M. Montoya: Now, is there any possibility that the tapes which were collected, that some of them could be missing or could have been destroyed?

Butterfield: Not to my knowledge. There shouldn't be. The Secret Service are highly trustworthy. It was their responsibility to change the tapes and to store—to mark the tapes and to store them...

Beefing up legal staff

Nixon determined to reveal all

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon is struggling once again to regain control over the wildly careening forces that threaten his effectiveness.

His official spokesmen promised a massive campaign to clear his name and re-establish confidence in his ability to govern, including a series of news conferences, presidential statements, addresses to the nation and meetings with Congressional leaders.

Before last week's end, Nixon had met personally with all 234 Republicans in Congress and some of the Democrats.

The President has decided to beef up his legal staff, now consisting of nine full-time lawyers and two consultants, with additional attorneys who will provide Judge John J. Sirica with the information he needs for the Watergate grand jury.

The staff of lawyers also will track down, compile and refute all the various allegations that have appeared in public print about Nixon, his friends and his family, according to Press Secretary Ronald T. Ziegler.

"We are going to beef up the legal staff and we are going to address these matters, case by case, head to head, with those people who are developing many of the erroneous theories and providing to the public many of the erroneous charges," Ziegler said earlier this week.

"The President is determined not to allow the charges that are being put forth, to allow the various theories that are developed by various investigative organizations —which are then provided in some cases to the public —to overwhelm us."

Among the "erroneous charges" to be addressed, Ziegler said, aside from Watergate, were:

—that improper financing was used in the purchase of Nixon's estates in Florida and California.

—that a $1 million private investment portfolio was managed by Nixon's friend, C.G. (Bebe) Rebozo, on behalf of the President.

—that milk producers were rewarded for a large political campaign contribution with an increase in milk price supports.

—that the International Telephone & Telegraph Co. was similarly rewarded for a large campaign contribution with a favorable ruling in a government anti-trust action.

—that Rebozo's handling of a $100,000 campaign contribution from billionaire industrialist Howard Hughes was improper.

—that the President's daughter, Tricia Nixon Cox, failed to pay proper taxes on her share of profits in a Florida land deal.

—that the President took advantage of the tax laws to obtain a massive deduction for himself which has resulted in him paying virtually no taxes on his $200,000 annual salary.

The key question is whether the President has waited too long to respond to the allegations.

Until a group of Republican Congressmen and Senators managed to get in to see him last Friday, he had not talked about his Watergate problems and the massive erosion of his credibility with any but a handful of White House aides — primarily chief of staff Alexander M. Haig Jr., Ziegler, and, to a lesser extent, his Watergate lawyer, J. Fred Buzhardt.

WORLD ALMANAC FACTS

Amelia Jenks Bloomer crusaded for women's rights in America during the 1800s. She gained fame for publicizing the "Bloomer costume" which became a symbol of radicalism, The World Almanac says. Bloomers were worn by women's rights leaders, but the costume was abandoned when it drew attention away from their main issues.

Here's fine safety play

By Oswald & James Jacoby

Oswald: "The man who wears both suspenders and a belt and also carried a few safety pins in his pockets, is not likely to ever have his pants fall down."

Jim: "It sounds as if you are getting ready for us to show some safety plays."

Oswald: "Why not? Here is a very simple one to start. The careless declarer lays down dummy's ace of clubs at trick two. East shows out and our careless player complains about his bad luck."

Jim: "The careful declarer comes to his hand with a spade at trick two and leads a low club. If West holds a singleton king South makes all the tricks. As it is, West plays the five and now South makes the five and now South makes the safety play by covering the safety play by covering with the six of clubs from dummy."

Oswald: "This guards against all three clubs in the West hand. If East held all three, West would show out then South would go up with dummy's ace and lead back toward his queen."

Jim: The bidding is worthy of note. With a minimum notrump and nearly all his strength in three-card suits, South rebids three notrump, whereupon North gives up all thought of the grand slam and just bids six."

Nixon plannnig trip to honor ex-legislator

MACON, Ga. (UPI) — Mayor Ronnie Thompson said Tuesday that "preliminary plans" were being made for a visit Sunday by President Nixon to this central Georgia city to honor former Congressman Carl Vinson on his 90th birthday.

Neither Thompson nor State Republican Chairman Bob Shaw would confirm the Nixon trip was definite, but Shaw said he was advised by the White House that an advance man had been sent to Macon to look into arrangements for the visit.

Shaw said the Nixon visit would be "non-partisan." Both Republicans and Democrats, including many from the state's congressional delegation, are expected to be on hand.

Vinson, who graduated from Mercer Law School in 1902, served 50 years and one month in Congress, retiring in 1964.

Stamps for worms

When the kiwi bird of New Zealand is hungry he stamps his feet. Earthworms respond to vibrations in the ground, come to the surface and get gobbled by the kiwi.

Guess what? rain postpones drags

By CURT WEBSTER
P-B Correspondent

ONTARIO — A little drag racing was sandwiched in between rainstorms Sunday at Ontario Motor Speedway, but it wasn't nearly enough.

The National Hot Rod Association was forced to announce its second rain postponement of the 1973 National season Sunday afternoon and hold eliminations in the Supernationals over until next Sunday at noon.

A scheduled 9:30 starting time for final qualifications had to wait until 11:45 in the morning to begin due to a rain-soaked pit lane dragstrip that refused to dry.

Then, at 2:30 in the afternoon, a squall hit OMS that turned the track into a riverbed and washed out all thought of further activity.

The NHRA, after officially closing the strip for the day, then officially closed qualifying for the meet, giving the top 16 qualifiers in the four categories positions for the start of eliminations.

The decision left a number of Top Fuel, Funny Car, and Pro Comp drivers on the outside looking in without ever getting a shot at qualifying.

Sunday's qualifying left the record book intact with nothing startling in the way of low e.t.'s. The strip, acclaimed as the fastest and quickest in the sport, doesn't appear to yield as well after rainfall.

Don Moody, defending Supernationals Top Fuel champion, barely qualified to defend his title. He and Dwight Hughes, qualifying side-by-side, ran an identical 6.21, tying them for 15th in the field.

Don Garlits, who didn't appear in Sunday's qualifying, has the low e.t. of the meet and of history, a 5.80 set on Friday.

Funny Car qualifying was marred by the spectacular flaming crash of Bobby Rowe.

Rowe's Plymouth was on its way to one of the top runs of the day when it suddenly burst into flames three-quarters of the way down the strip.

Mike Miller, whose Vega was running next to Rowe's machine, apparently took a spark from the conflagration next to it and lit up in similar fashion.

Rowe continued down the pit lane into Turn One on the oval course where he slammed into the restraining wall.

Rowe managed to climb out of the burning wreckage before emergency crews arrived. Amazingly, the extent of Rowe's injuries was some thigh burns and a backache.

Miller's car was quickly extinguished and he was completely unharmed.

Rowe's e.t. stood at 6.41 and, if his crew can rebuild the car, he qualifies sixth for the eliminations.

Three "Big name" Funny Car drivers failed to qualify and stand as alternates for next Sunday. Tom McEwen, Sush Matsubara, and Danny Ongais all failed to make the program and can only hope somebody won't show up.

Rams keep hex over S.F.

By MIKE RAWLINSON
P-B Staff Writer

LOS ANGELES — For the past three years the Rams have beaten up the San Francisco 49ers regularly, only to watch the Bay Area Bombers win the NFC West and a berth in the Super Bowl playoffs.

It won't happen this year.

The Rams made that perfectly clear on a wet and windy afternoon at the Coliseum Sunday in front of 78,358 chilled spectators.

L.A. trounced the 49ers, 31-13, for the seventh time in as many encounters to eliminate them from title contention in 1973.

In the past it has been John Brodie the Rams have picked on. Sunday, it was Joe Reed, a two-year man from Mississippi State, getting his first chance over Brodie and Steve Spurrier.

Reed found the Los Angeles welcome less than hospitable as cornerback Charlie Stukes intercepted two of his passes, resulting in two Ram scores — a field goal and a touchdown in the span of a minute — to turn the game around in the second quarter.

"We were in it until then," San Francisco head coach Dick Nolan said afterwards.

San Francisco's record dips to 3-7 with the loss, five full games behind the 8-2 Rams with only four games to play in the regular season.

L.A. has a [illegible] lead over second place Atlanta which has to face the unbeaten Minnesota Vikings tonight on national television.

The Rams scored 17 points in the second quarter after a slow offensive start the 49ers took advantage of it to gain a 3-0 lead on a 24-yard field goal by Bruce Gossett.

"I wouldn't describe our start as sluggish," head coach Chuck Knox advised. "I just felt that the 49ers came to play and they took it to us at the beginning of the game. But I was happy that we kept doing the things that we intended to do and eventually it paid off."

John Hadl and Harold Jackson made the biggest dent in the 49er defense, teaming up for three bomb-style touchdown plays that alone beat San Francisco.

The plays covered 25, 22 and 57 yards and propelled the Rams into leads of 7-3, 17-6 and 31-6. San Francisco had only a pair of Gossett field goals to show until 9:23 in the fourth period.

Hadl completed 12 of 22 for 216 yards and the three scores to Jackson, who caught four altogether for 117 yards. The three touchdowns gave the lightning quick wide receiver 12 total for the season. He's moving in on Elroy

Lakers enjoy a clean sweep, defeat Cavs

By DON BRADLEY
P-B Staff Writer

INGLEWOOD — The Lakers didn't exactly gain revenge for the 115-96 loss to the Cavaliers at Cleveland, but they did win Sunday night's game at the Forum, 102-100.

The defending division champions were playing for the third night in a row and coach Bill Sharman was happy to accomplish a weekend sweep.

"A tough one, but I'll take it," he said greeting writers in the hall outside the dressing room. "We struggled," he admitted. "We didn't pass well, we turned the ball over way too many times (28 to be exact); but these are big wins . . . when you don't play well against a team that isn't doing well and still pick up the win."

The Lakers were without the services of Jerry West and Bill Bridges, out with injuries. Both were due to be examined this morning and, if found fit, will fly to New York and join the team there for Tuesday night's game with the Knicks (6 p.m. on Channel 5).

A 30-point output by Gail Goodrich and a great performance on the boards by Happy Hairston paved the way for the Laker victory.

Hairston, playing his best game of the season, pulled down 11 offensive and 15 defensive rebounds for a game leading 26. He also had five assists and scored nine points.

"My leg is about 90 per cent now," he revealed. "The training camp this year was the toughest of my career, trying to get in shape and come back (from knee surgery)."

"I'm playing hurt now," he continued, "but I think I've just about got it turned around.

If Hairston is only 90 percent now, Sharman has been fooled by the 6-7 forward's play. "I think Happy is all the way back," he said, "although I haven't asked him about his leg. The way he's played the plast five or six games is just great."

Connie Hawkins was the second high scorer for Sharman's team. The 6-8 flash scored 17 points.

"I certainly am pleased with the way he (Hawkins) is trying to fit in," Sharman remarked. I've talked with him and told him I'd like to see him shoot more because he's such a great shooter."

The Laker coach then inquired what Hawkins figures were for Sunday night's game.

"Eight for 14," he grinned. I think I'll have to talk to him again. A few more shots and he'll score over 20 points."

Brodie-less 'Friscoans like a bunch of strangers

By DON BRADLEY
P-B Staff Writer

LOS ANGELES — He stood on the sidelines, an enigmatic figure; alternately folding his arms across his chest or standing with his thumbs hooked in his belt.

During the second half of the Rams 31-13 win over the San Francisco 49ers, he made his most decisive move. Striding purposefully to the bench, he put on a heavy jacket to protect himself against the chill as the sun disappeared and the wind came up.

And that was the way John Brodie spent Sunday afternoon.

Out on the playing field, the team for which he had labored nearly 17 full years was seemingly directionless as it fell an easy mark to the methodically efficient Rams.

John Riley Brodie has announced his retirement, but it is the San Francisco 49ers who are playing out the string.

And Brodie watches and waits . . . and waits . . . and waits.

It does not seem like a Ram - 49er game without the familiar number 12 out there throwing strikes for the white-jerseyed visitors.

The San Francisco quarterback this day is a youngster named Joe Reed, only two years removed from the college ranks.

Reed completed only 10 of 29 passes for 128 yards and no touchdowns. Two of his throws are intercepted by Charlie Stukes and converted into 10 Ram points on a field goal and touchdown.

And Brodie watches and waits . . . and waits . . . and waits.

"John is a 'relief pitcher' now," says veteran 49er publicist George McFadden.

But Brodie doesn't even relieve.

For the last two plays of the game, with 19 seconds left, Steve Spurrier goes in as San Francisco signal caller.

Spurrier completes two passes for 15 yards and then the gun sounds ending the contest.

It has been the worst looking 49er team seen in many a year that has performed aimlessly this day.

When pressed by reporters in the San Francisco locker room, coach Dick Nolan says, "it's possible Brodie may play again this season."

John Brodie is in good health. He also holds 17 of the 22 listed 49er passing records. His 30,422 total yards is only fourth on the all-time NFL list (behind John Unitas, Yelberton Abraham Tittle, and Fran Tarkenton). Only Unitas and Tittle have completed more passes than Brodie's 2,463. His lifetime completion percentage is 55 percent.

Yet John Brodie will probably get into another game only by default . . . if injury sidelines Reed and Spurrier.

Reed, according to team officials, was hit in the jaw on the first pass of the game, and again later by a helmet (supposedly containing the head of one of his own or the Rams' players).

X-rays are to be taken, they say and Reed's jaw may be fractured.

Brodie is interviewed on the post game radio show and then takes a long shower.

Upon returning to his cubicle in the 49er dressing room, he answers questions curtly, sometimes taking a long look at his interrogator before answering.

"I've been on the sidelines before and I don't see things any differently there," he says.

When asked how he would compare the 1973 Rams to the many other Ram teams he has faced, he replies matter of factly, "The Rams are better. They play very well together. They are very well coordinated in all phases of their game."

Five valley have playoff berths

Five valley high schools have been selected to compete in the first round of the CIF football playoffs next weekend, but all five are in for a rough time.

And not only that, but all five will also be on the road for the opening round.

The two San Antonio League co-champions, Pomona and Chino, drew highly-ranked teams in the first round of the 3-A playoffs.

Pomona, which enters the CIF playoffs with a 5-4 record, faces 3-A's No. 3 ranked Crescenta Valley — tri-champion of the Foothill League. Crescenta Valley, which finished the year with an 8-1 record, lost to Blair over the weekend to throw the league into a three-way tie.

Chino, ending the regular season with a 6-3 mark, opens against No. 4 ranked Villa Park — champion of the Crestview League. Villa Park went undefeated this year and will probably be third-ranked this week after Crescenta Valley's loss.

Royal Oak, the undefeated Hacienda League champion, must battle No. 4 ranked Riverside North in 2-A competition.

Poly stuns Fullerton in mud bowl

By CRAIG TRAVIS
P-B Staff Writer

SANTA ANA — Cal Poly snapped a nine-game California Collegiate Athletic Association (CCAA) losing streak, Sunday afternoon, to finish its 1973 league season tied for third place.

The Broncos staged their finest defensive effort of the year in downing Cal State Fullerton, 10-7, on a muddy Santa Ana Bowl field.

The Broncos, who had never beaten a CSF football team (0-3) and had allowed 106 points in three CCAA contests, checked the Titans on 275 yards total offensive and one touchdown.

Poly, (3-6-1 overall and 1-3 league) normally an offensive minded team, committed some crucial mental errors that could have cost it the game but fortunately the Titans didn't take advantage.

Besides their defense, the Broncos had game-tolling assistance from Fullerton placekicker Bill Fenoglio, who missed two field goals from inside the 25-yard line. The second attempt was a 23-yarder, with 2:26 left in the game, that sailed wide and to the left. The three points would have left the Broncs fit to be tied, 10-10.

"I suppose it sounds strange to complain after winning," said Poly head coach Roy Anderson after the game, "But this showed us that if we can beat Fullerton, we can beat anyone in the CCAA."

Cal Poly's defense rose to the occasion, better than at any other time this season, late in the fourth quarter.

The Titans started, what looked like would be, a game-winning drive on their own 19 with 9:52 left to play.

The march consumed seven minutes and thirty seconds as CSF drove to the Poly four yard, where it had a first down. There Poly's defense stiffened.

Fullerton's leading rusher, entering the contest, Dwayne Sims (1,016 yards) gained three yards to the one. Quarterback Tom Madigan was stopped at the line of scrimmage. On the next play, Poly was given a break, Fullerton's Larry Brumsey (tight end) was off-side, moving the ball back to the six. A Madigan pass fell incomplete leaving the Titans with a fourth-and-goal.

Fenoglio then attempted the field goal that sailed wide left, giving Poly what looked like a cinch win.

But the Broncos, determined to make the finish exciting, unwisely used the clock to their disadvantage.

With 2:20 left in the game, Poly figured to take the snap and fall down thus eating up the clock. Fullback Greg Cruz netted two yards, moving the ball to the Titan 22. On second down, a Bronco penalty put the ball at their own 11 yard line.

Then the Broncs, crossed up the 2,000 arm chair coaches seated in the stands, by going to the air (with 1:32 left) as two passes fell incomplete leaving Poly a fourth down.

John Sedia then got off his best punt of the year, as it sailed downfield 55 yards and out of bounds at the Titan 34.

Fullerton managed two first downs on passes, that combined for 24 yards, leaving CSF with a first down at the Bronco 42. Madigan then threw three straight passes as the seconds ticked away on the clock.

Madigan's fourth down aerial, a long desperation try, was intercepted by CP's Rod Hiatt at the four, who returned it to the 39 where the final gun sounded.

McNeill brothers ready for big battle

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Rod McNeill vs. Fred McNeill.

The battle of the West's two best college football teams Saturday is more than a UCLA - University of Southern California confrontation.

It's a matchup of the McNeill Brothers; tailback Rod of the Trojans and defensive end Fred of the Bruins.

As they liked to say in the old days, this one is for all the marbles. The Pacific-8's Rose Bowl spot is at stake.

"I think Fred's going to be a little tougher this year," said Rod. "I think I took him a little by surprise last season and he didn t like that."

McNeill scored a touchdown in USC's 24-7 victory over the Bruins a year ago. That game also decided who went to Pasadena, Calif., from the conference.

The brothers NcNeill are extremely close. At 22, Rod is a year older than Fred.

Rod McNeill will be the guest speaker at Bonita High's fall sports banquet next Monday, Nov. 26, along with USC teammate Allen Carter, a Bonita graduate.

"We started kidding each other a little earlier this year," USC's McNeill laughed. "I've been looking forward to this game all season. This one's going to be a lot of fun to play in."

Both players are seniors, 6-3 and 220 pounds. And both played their high school football at Baldwin Park, Calif.

"We are very good friends," said Rod. "Especially when one of us loses. After UCLA lost to Nebraska in their first game this year, I met Fred at the airport and tried to pick him up. He was at the airport to meet me after we lost at Notre Dame, too."

Playing behind Anthony Davis, McNeill is USC's No. 2 rusher with 668 yards on 120 carries, a 5.5 average. He has gained 354 yards in his last three games.

Sidelined for the entire 1971 season with a hip injury, McNeill earned the Trojans starting tailback job for the start of 1972. But Davis took it away from him.

"I understand the situation," said the articulate senior, "and I think I've adjusted to it. I'm happy playing second string as long as I feel I'm part of the team and accomplishing something."

Actually, McNeill is being used on almost an alternating basis with Davis although the fleet-footed junior is still the Trojans' No. 1 rusher.

USC vs. UCLA's wishbone?

"Well, I don't think you'll see a shutout," McNeill answered. "Both of us can score a lot of points."

The Trojans' season?

"We've had it tough from the beginning because we've been compared from the start with last year's team. And that team they tell me was one of the best ever to play.

"Personally don't feel badly we have a loss and a tie on our record. They came against two very good teams. I like our position. We're in the Rose Bowl picture and that's what counts."

Foreman, Malone expected to play for Vikings, Falcons

ATLANTA (UPI) — Chuck Foreman and Art Malone are both expected to return to action tonight when the Atlanta Falcons host the unbeaten Minnesota Vikings in the NFL's Monday night game.

Foreman, the rookie from Miami (Fla.) who leads the Vikings in rushing despite missing the past two games with a knee injury, insists he's "ready to go" tonight. Malone, the Falcons' inside bread - and - butter man who also has been out two weeks, also is reported "fit."

Atlanta (6-3), seeking its sixth straight victory, needs Malone at his best because the Falcons have lost one and maybe both of its wide receivers. Ken Burrow, who will undergo neck surgery, is definitely out and Al Dodd, who suffered a leg injury at Philadelphia last week, is "doubtful."

This may mean that Atlanta will have to go with rookies Tom Geredine and Louis Neal as wide receivers and that means the Falcons will need all the running they can muster.

The Vikings (9-0) have to be favored, with or without Foreman. After all, they haven't been beaten this year, in exhibition or regular season, and you can't argue with success. They have appeared exceptionally strong their last two games —beating Cleveland 26-3 and Detroit 28-7.

Minnesota has a balanced offense. Quarterback Fran Tarkenton has passed for 1,456 yards and 10 touchdowns and the Vikings have a half dozen proven runners.

Atlanta depends more on its running game and that means Malone and Dave Hampton, No. 3 rusher in the NFC with 642 yards, must be at top form if the Falcons are to move the ball.

The oft-told quarterback situation regarding these two teams is worth repeating. Tarkenton played for six years under Atlanta Coach Norm Van Brocklin when Van Brocklin coached the Vikings. Bob Lee, the Falcons' quarterback, was Tarkenton's backup man last season and Bob Berry, Tarkenton's current understudy, was Atlanta's starting quarterback the past several seasons.

Atlanta defensive end John Zook said films indicate that Tarkenton is no longer the "scrambler" who used to upset Van Brocklin.

"He doesn't appear to run as much as in the past and seems to like to go with the short game," said Zook. "It's improved the Vikings' running game that may be the best we've faced all season."

Claremont Raiders win

Pomona clubs fall in Mt. Baldy Bowl

ONTARIO — The Claremont Raiders, Ontario Eagles and Fontana Bucks were the Pop Warner football winners Sunday at the Mt. Baldy Conference Championship Bowl at Chaffey High's Graber Field.

Pomona's two undefeated teams, the Bruins and Dolphins, both suffered their first losses of the campaign on wet and windy afternoon.

The Bruins saw their winning streak snapped at 20 in a 26-12 loss to the Ontario Eagles in the Pee Wee Division championship game.

Edwin Morris scored two touchdowns for the Bruins in the first quarter on a 72-yard run and a 75-yard interception return but Ontario grabbed a permanent lead when Scott Bennett returned a kickoff 75 yards for the go-ahead TD.

The Pomona Dolphins couldn't get their offense untracked in a 12-6 loss to the Fontana Bucks in the Midget Division battle. After Fontana grabbed a 12-0 lead at halftime, Pomona came back in the third quarter when halfback Pat Munford scored on a two-yard run two plays after linebacker Mike Brown recovered a Fontana fumble on the Bucks' five-yard line.

James Moore recovered another Fontana fumble on the Bucks' 30 with two minutes left in the game but the Dolphins were stopped on their fourth down play.

Coach Mike Sims' Claremont Raiders finished with a perfect 8-0 season in the Jr. Pee Wee Division by blanking the Chino Mavericks, 12-0. Halfback Vince Matthews scored both touchdowns on runs of 55 and 14 yards.

Pomona's Pop Warner teams will be remaining busy.

The Dolphins leave Thanksgiving morning for Eureka to play the Hoopa Braves at 1 p.m. Saturday in the Redwood Conference Bowl at Humboldt State.

Meanwhile, the other Pomona teams will be hosting the annual Pomona Bowl on Saturday at Garey High. Teams from Arizona will provide the opposition. Games are set at 11 a.m., 1 p.m. and 3 p.m.

Lakers get weekend sweep

Sharman explained that Hawkins had told him he didn't want to come in and seem to take over as a shooter.

"Connie's geting used to the players and the players are getting used to Connie," he went on. "He is an outstanding passer for a forward, maybe the best in the league."

The Laker coach later amended that for fear he would irritate the likes of Rick Berry, John Havlicek, etc. and inspire them to greater performances against his team.

While the Lakers top the Pacific Division of the NBA with a 12-6 mark. The Cavs further cemented their grip on last place in the Central Division winning only four of 19.

All four Cleveland victories have come when the opposing club has either had a missing center or the center got in early foul trouble. Elmore Smith was out with a fractured cheek bone when they beat the Lakers.

The Cavs have tried five players at center. Steve Patterson, the UCLA center between the Alcindor and Walton eras, played most of Sunday night's game.

The 6-9, 225 pound native of Santa Maria, Calif. scored 10 points and grabbed a team high 12 rebounds before fouling out late in the game.

It was after his departure that the Lakers spurted to a big enough lead to hold on and win.

In spite of Wilt Chamberlain's defection to the ABA, the Lakers have no problems at center. Elmore Smith appears to have adopted the style that Muhammed Ali flashed when he was king of the heavyweights.

Elmore "floats like a butterfly and stings like a bee."

World Open will drop to 72 holes

PINEHURST, N. C. (UPI) — Chunky, balding Miller Barber, the "Mr. X" of pro golf for years, has finally put a record on the ledger that's likely to stand a long, long time.

Barber's record is pocketing the biggest chunk of money— $100,000-that any golfer ever won for a single event. Ironically, the record will stand because the marathon eight-round format that brought him the money has been crossed off as a failure.

This year, the World Open Golf Championship lasted 144 holes and had a purse of $500,000. Next year, plans call for a standard 72 holes and a purse of about $300,000, with $75,000 going to the victor, still the richest event on the tour.

If this year's tourney, which wound up Saturday, had gone only 72 holes, Gibby Gilbert would be the man putting $100,000 in the bank today instead of Barber. But Gilbert finished in a five-way tie for 15th place after 144 holes, good for only $5,812. If it had ended after six rounds, as some have suggested, young tour sophomore Tom Watson would have the $100,000, but he wound up in a tie for fourth with $17,000.

Barber would have been seventh if the tourney ended at 72 holes, a solid finish such as he's had time after time in 16 years on the PGA tour but nowhere near the money and the glamour associated with copping golf's richest prize.

The eight-round format was designed to show the best golfer over the long haul and it may have done that.

"Miller is one of the most underrated players on the tour," said Leonard Thompson after the tournament in which he finished third behind Barber and rookie Ben Crenshaw.

"He played good, solid golf—he always does—and deserved to win," said Crenshaw, who at 21 is half Barber's age.

Barber was more modest. "I'm no Jack Nicklaus yet," he quipped as he walked into the press room after the victory.

"I just tried to whip the golf course," he said. "If you do that, you beat a lot of people."

The people he beat included most of the big names in golf, with the notable exceptions of Nicklaus, Lee Trevino and Tom Weiskopf.

Denver Broncos second in AFC West

By United Press International

The Denver Broncos, the Cleveland Browns and a controversial official's call have combined to set up one heckuva race in the American Conference.

The Broncos, the only American Conference club which has never participated in post-season play, moved into solid contention for a playoff slot Sunday as they upset the Pittsburgh Steelers 23-13.

Pittsburgh's loss, combined with Cleveland's stunning 7-3 upset of the Oakland Raiders and Cincinnati's hairbreadth 20-14 victory over the New York Jets when an official disallowed two apparent Joe Namath touchdown passes in the final minute, set up a hectic final month in the AFC Central as three clubs are within two games of first.

With the score tied 13-13, Jim Turner kicked a 46-yard field goal which bounced over the crossbar to give Denver a 16-13 lead and Charley Johnson sealed the win when he threw two yards to tight end Riley Odoms late in the game. Floyd Little also had a 10-yard TD run for the Broncos, now unbeaten in their last six games, while Terry Hanratty provided the lone Steeler TD with a 42-yard pass to Ron Shanklin.

"We caught Pittsburgh at the right time and that gives us more momentum to face our next two opponents," Denver Coach John Ralston said. "Pittsburgh had three tough opponents in a row and their grudge battle with Oakland last week had taken something away from them."

Maurice Tyler recovered two fumbles for Denver to set up Turner's 32-yard field goal and Johnson s TD pass.

Mike Phipps threw a seven-yard TD pass to Fair Hooker early in the second quarter and Cleveland's defense made it stand up against the Rai-Browns 1 ½ games behind Pittsburgh and knocked the Raiders out of a first-place tie with Kansas City to third in the AFC West behind Denver.

"We caught them in a blitz on what I guess looked to them like a running play," Phipps explained. "That left Hooker one-on-one with Willie Brown and Fair beat his man."

"What beat us is that we couldn't get field position," said Raider Coach John Madden. "We didn't make many mistakes but penalties kept us in the hole. Things have really turned around for us. Two weeks ago we led our division by a game and now we're in third place. But the situation isn't hopeless and we still have to play the two teams ahead of us."

Cincinnati took a 17-0 lead over the Jets and held a 20-14 advantage when Namath, who's been out since Sept. 23 with a shoulder separation, entered the game. Namath, who hit 6-of-13 for 98 yards, had his first drive stopped by a fumble. But he hit passes of 21 and 16 yards to Rich Caster, 31 to Eddie Bell and 10 again to Caster to bring the ball to the one. An offside penalty moved the ball to the six-inch line with 19 seconds left but Cliff McClain was stopped short of the goalline and time ran out on the Jets.

Jet Coach Weeb Ewbank, who chased the officials across the field after the game, was critical of two calls—one which ruled Caster out of bounds in the end zone and the other on Namath's final completion to Caster which was ruled at the one instead of a TD.

"Richard was in twice," Ewbank fumed afterward. "I thought I scored both times," Caster agreed, "but the man said no and that's that."

"So close, so close," Namath said. "You get so close only to lose."

Elsewhere, Kansas City bombed Houston 38-14, Miami shut out Buffalo 17-0, Dallas ripped Philadelpia 31-10, Washington downed Baltimore 22-14, Los Angeles whipped San Francisco 31-13, New England stunned Green Bay 33-24, the New York Giants overcame St. Louis 24-13, San Diego edged New Orleans 17-14 and Detroit trounced Chicago 30-7. Minnesota is at Atlanta tonight.

Mike Livingston passed for two TDs and ran for another as the Chiefs took sole possession of first in the AFC West by routing Houston. Livingston had TD passes of five yards to Gary Butler and 24 to Otis Taylor and ran three yards for another as the Chiefs enjoyed their best offensive output of the year. Lynn Dickey had a 62-yard TD pass to Bob Gresham for Houston, now 1-9.

Miami, with Larry Csonka plunging for one TD and Paul Warfield catching an 18-yard TD pass from Bob Griese, wrapped up its thrid straight AFC title by stopping Buffalo. O.J. Simpson had 120 yards for the Bills in his quest for a single season rushing record.

Roger Staubach had TD passes of 28 yards to Bob Hayes and two to Walt Garrison and ran a yard for another TD as the Cowboys downed Philadelphia. Roman Gabriel's 80-yard pass to Charles Young accounted for the lone Eagle TD.

Curt Knight s five field goals and a one-yard TD run by Larry Brown helped Washington beat the Colts for the first time since 1959 and John Hadl threw TD passes of 25, 22 and 57 yards to Harold Jackson as the Rams clubbed the 49ers for the seventh straight time.

Jim Plunkett threw a 63-yard TD pass to Reggie Rucker and a 28-yarder to Bob Windsor and ran a yard for another score as the Patriots rallied for 24 points in the second half to upset Green Bay. Norm Snead's 45-yard TD pass to Ron Johnson helped the Giants beat St. Louis and end a seven-game losing streak. Rookie Gary Keithley, replacing the injured Jim Hart, had an 80-yard TD pass to Mel Gray for St. Louis.

Rookie Dick Jauron returned an interception 95 yards for a TD to spark the Lions over Chicago and Ron Smith's 84-yard punt return lifted San Diego past New Orleans for Charger Coach Ron Waller's first victory.

Sharks beaten by Whalers

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — "We swung into more goal scoring," said temporary coach Ted McCaskill, "but we have to be thinking more about stopping goals from going into our net."

While the Los Angeles Sharks were having trouble installing a stingier defense, the New England Whalers were having a little more success as they held on to a 5-2 victory Sunday night in a WHA match.

Whaler goalie Al Smith preserved the win by stopping 16-of-18 shots in a wild third period in which two goals were scored by each team. Smith finished the game with 33 of 35 stops.

McCaskill is the Sharks' captain but wasn't dressed Sunday night because he was filling in for Terry Slater, who was suspended and faces other disciplinary action.

Slater shoved linesman Dennis Dahlman during a dispute following Cleveland's 4-3 overtime win over the Sharks last Friday night.

Wet weather halts the drags

Pro Stock qualifying produced no major surprises, and Wayne Gapp remains as the number one qualifier in that category. Gapp's Pinto ran an 8.905 at 151.77 Friday to lead the field.

Defending champ Bill Jenkins winds up in fifth with a 8.996 in 145.81 in his new Vega. Don Nicholson, who grabbed the Winternationals in February, is in the program with a 9.210 in 146.10 at the wheel of his Pinto.

Ken Veney will lead the Pro Comp drivers into eliminations. Veney's 7.049 in 191.89 set in a class A Funny Car still stands as the category's top time. Steve Wiencek, Pomona's latest entry in drag racing, has his A Funny Car fifth with a 7.175 in 190.67.

In the drag bike category, Boris Murray of La Verne shot into second with an 8.691 in 163.04 on his Triumph.

Murray trails only defending Bike titlist T. C. Christenson of Kenosha, Wisconsin, whose 8.451 on Friday stands now as a new National record for the category.

Only eight drag bikes are qualified in the Supernationals.

Fans who held tickets for eliminations will be delighted to find that the NHRA will honor them next Sunday.

Hadl, Jackson get together

Hirsch's single-season record of 17 TD receptions.

Gossett's second field goal of 17 yards in the second quarter made the game interesting, 7-6, until Stukes picked off two Reed passes in less than a minute.

The first resulted in David Ray's 37-yard field goal with 1:11 left in the half. The drive began at the Ram 39 and Hadl hit Jim Bertelsen on a short pass that the running back carried for a 44-yard gain, shedding tacklers as he went.

It moved the Rams to the 49er 25, where Hadl hit Jackson in the end zone for an apparent touchdown. It was called back, however, because the quarterback released the ball beyond the line of scrimmage. Two palys later, with a fourth down situation, Knox sent Ray on the field to do his thing.

Stukes' second interception gave the Rams field position at the San Francisco 42. Hadl hit Lawrence McCutcheon for a 19-yard gain as time was running out, and two plays later fired to Jackson for 22-yards and a touchdown. Ray's kick made it 17-6 Rams at the half.

Bertelsen and McCutcheon combined for 13 yards of L.A.'s 185 yards rushing for the game. Bertelsen picked up 59 on 15 carries with a five-yard touchdown run in the third quarter before he left the game with a deep cut under his right eye. He appeared to be okay in the locker-room after the game.

McCutcheon led all rushers with 79 yards on 20 carries. He and Bertelsen each caught three of Hadl's passes for 19 and 64 yards respectively.

The Rams outgained San Francisco 414-195 in total offensive yards and 21-12 in first downs.

Reed completed 10 of 29 attempts for 128 yards. Tight end Ted Kwalick was his main receiver, catching three for 37 yards.

On the ground, the 49ers managed only 66 net, with running back Jimmy Thomas getting the biggest share, 32 yards on nine carries.

Vic Washington got the only 49er touchdown on a one-yard burst that was the result of a pass interference penalty on Stukes who was covering Dan Obramowicz in the end zone. It gave San Francisco a first goal at the Los Angeles one-yard line.

Cal Poly has the distinction of playing Fullerton in its first and last CCAA game.

The Titans will join the Pacific Coast Athletic Association next year. The Broncos were CSF's first CCAA opponent in 1970.

Placekicker Klaus Trettin gave Poly a 3-0 lead with 10:23 left in the second quarter with a 23-yard field goal.

The Titans took the ensuing kickoff and drove 85 yards on 15 plays, aided by three first downs in penalties, with Sims capping the drive on a three yard TD run. Fenoglio's PAT made it 7-3 Fullerton.

The Broncos regained the lead and won the game, 10-7, on their first possession of the second half driving 53 yards on nine plays with Cruz scoring from the three. Trettin added his 20th consecutive PAT.

Fullerton's Jim McDonald was the leading ball carrier in the game with 122 yards on 26 rushes. Sims finished with 33.

Cruz was Poly's leading rusher with 74 yards on 26 carries. Quarterback Jim Zorn, No. 1 in the nation in total offense with 2,458 yards entering the game, added 28 on the ground. The southpaw connected on eight of 20 passes for 109 yards.

Flanker Joe Fabian grabbed two passes for 41 yards while Ron Tatum caught a pair for 40 yards and Don Harrison added two catches for 35 yards.

Linebacker Dave Chapman was the leading tackler in the game with 13 while safety Dennis Amador added 12 stops. Mark Mahan was in on nine tackles and recovered a fumble and defensive end Bill Embree added eight stops.

Fullerton, now 6-4 overall and 1-3 in the CCAA, is the only team with a winning record on the season that Poly's has been able to beat.

The Broncos conclude their 1973 season next Saturday at Balboa Stadium in San Diego against USIU (1-8). A team that lost to UC Riverside 76-28 Saturday night and hasn't held an opponent to less than 42 points in the past four games.

Australian Davis Cup team get ready for USA netters

MELBOURNE (UPI) — The Australian Davis Cup team put the "USA" labels on its luggage today as it readied for yet another Davis Cup clash with the United States.

Australian team captain Neal Fraser, bursting with confidence after his team's fighting, 4-1 semi-final win over Czechoslovakia over the weekend, called on U. S. tennis officials to field anyone they like in their cup lineup.

The results of the semi-finals which put the Aussies aboard Tuesday's plane for Cleveland were:

Rod Laver beat Jan Kodes 63, 7-5, 7-5; Jiri Hrebec beat John Newcombe 6-4, 8-10, 6-4, 7-5.

Second day doubles: Ken Rosewall-Rod Laver beat Vladimir Zednik-Jan Kodes, 6-4, 14-12, 7-9, 8-6.

Third day singles: Rod Laver beat Jiri Hrebec 5-7, 6-3, 6-4, 4-6, 6-4; John Newcombe beat Jan Kodes 6-2, 6-2, 6-4.

Under exisiting Davis cup nations rules no contract professional is eligible for selection in the Davis Cup, and such rules preclude the Americans calling on Arthur Ashe or Cliff Richey for their Nov. 30 defense at Cleveland.

"We are quite prepared to waive the rule for this challenge," Fraser said. "We moved this way at the cup meeting at Wimbledon this year.

"I think our boys, Rod Laver, Ken Rosewall and John Newcombe can take the United States 4-1 no matter who they put in," Fraser said.

"At this stage Stan Smith will certainly lead the U.S. team and it looks as though Tom Gorman or Marty Reissen will back him up in the singles," Fraser added.

"Ashe or Richey would be better than either of those two and we want the Americans to field their best team," Fraser said.

"It's up to the United States Lawn Tennis Association to move on this challenge of ours."

Fraser's confident prediction over an easy Australian victory followed three days of glorious tennis in the semifinals with Czechoslovakia fighting every inch of the way against Australia's champion trio.

Before the semi-finals started Friday Australia was quoted a 1-6 favorite to take the Czechs, but the European zone champions took the wraps off 23-year-old Piri Hrebec, a virtual unknown. He shook the Aussie camp on the first day by wiping Newcombe off in four sets.

Earlier Friday Rod Laver had little more than a workout when he thrashed reigining Wimbledon champion Jan Kodes in straight sets.

Newcombe, three times Wimbledon champion and current Australian champion, could not find any weakness in Hrebec's all-court play or blistering service.

Hrebec pulled off one for the record books when he aced Newcombe four times in one game, and gave Czechoslovakia a much needed boost.

Newcombe, suffering from a virus, which he never complained about, was so disgusted with his form he volunteered to drop out of the second day doubles and the Australian seclectors quickly recalled Rosewall, the 39-year-old champion.

Redlands wins on Damschen field goal, 3-0

Rick Damschen's 29-yard field goal with 11 minutes left in the game gave the University of Redlands a 3-0 win over Whittier College Saturday to give the Bulldogs' sole possession of the Southern California Intercollegiate Athletic Conference (SCIAC) football championship.

Redlands completed its SCIAC schedule witha perfect 5-0 record and enjoyed an overall 8-1 campaign. With the loss, Whittier ended up sharing second place with La Verne. Both teams were 3-2 in conference action.

Damschen's game-winning kick was set up when Whittier was unable to get off a fourth down punt early in the fourth quarter because of a bad snap and Redlands took over on the Poets' 39-yard line.

In other action Saturday night, tailback Derek Williams scored four times and set two school records to lead UC Riverside to a smashing 76-28 win over USIU.

The Highlanders, who finished with a 8-2 record, rolled up 738 yards in total offense against the Westerners (1-8). Williams rushed for 306 yards on 37 carries as he set school records for yards and touchdowns.

Earlier in the day, Cal Poly San Luis Obispo was whipped by Boise State, 43-10, to knock the Mustangs out of contention for a berth in the NCAA Division II playoffs. SLO (8-1) closes its campaign next Saturday against Long Beach State.

Citrus finishes 2nd in State C-C

Cotton won the individual title by plodding over the four-mile course in 19:35.0. Close finished fifth in 20:01. while Grossmont piled up 89 points.

El Camino was second with 91 points followed by San Jose City College with 96 and Fullerton with 115.

Palomar edged Citrus 82-85 to take the small college division championship. Individual winner was Ben de la Garza of Cabrillo who was timed in 19:48.4.

Key game

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (UPI) — Michigan is the home team Nov. 24 in the bitter Michigan-Ohio State football rivalry that often determines the Big 10 championship. Ohio State won at home last year, 14-11, making it the fifth straight year the home team had won in the series.

Only the Peach Bowl is open

By United Press International

The overall bowl picture turned out to be predictable, but there is still some mystery left as the college football season enters its final big week.

Seven of the 11 major college post-season bowls were filled Saturday and not one of the teams named came as any surprise. The results of the pairings were known well before the NCAA's official announcements went out, and the various bowl committees went right along with their original choices.

Four of the teams named to post-season competition — Kansas, Tennessee, Missouri and Auburn—were beaten Saturday, but that didn't matter. They all knew in advance that no matter what the outcome of their games they would still be invited.

The Liberty, Astro-Bluebonnet, Gator, Sun, Sugar, Cotton and Orange Bowls all were filled Saturday, leaving the Fiesta, Tangerine, Peach and Rose Bowls still searching for opponents.

Only the Peach Bowl committee showed real concern about having a winner on Saturday. Arkansas had been promised a bid to the Peach Bow, if it beat Southern Methodist, but the best the Razorbacks could do was a 7-7 tie and the backers of the bowl said "no thanks."

The Peach Bowl committee, in fact, is willing to wait until next weekend to find a suitable opponent for Maryland, which was named Saturday after beating Clemson. The committee has given Georgia the same ultimatum it gave Arkansas, "beat Georgia Tech next Saturday and you're in. Lose and we'll find someone else."

The other three bowls also will be filled this week.

Pittsburgh was named Saturday to the Fiesta Bowl on Dec. 21 at Tempe, Ariz., and the Panthers' host will be the winner of Saturday's game between Arizona State and Arizona, which will decide the Western Athletic Conference.

Miami of Ohio, winner of the Mid-American Conference and boasting a perfect 10-0 record, gets an official invite to the Tangerine Bowl today and the Redskins' opponent for the Dec. 22 contest at Orlando, Fla., will probably be East Carolina. However, the Pirates are not considered a shoo-in for the berth and they have stated that unless they get a bid by tonight they are going to tell the committee to forget it. Temple is also being considered.

Both spots in the Rose Bowl are currently open, but they automatically go to the winners of the Big Ten and the Pacific Eight conferences. Those two titles will be decided Saturday when top-ranked Ohio State meets fourth-ranked Michigan for the Big Ten crown and eighth-ranked UCLA takes on ninth-ranked Southern California for the Pac Eight championship.

The other bowl pairings are:

Cotton—Texas vs. Nebraska; Sugar — Alabama vs. Notre Dame; Orange—Penn State vs. LSU; Gator—Tennessee vs. Texas Tech; Liberty—North Carolina State vs. Kansas; Astro-Bluebonnet — Houston vs. Tulane; and Sun—Missouri vs. Auburn.

In addition to deciding the remaining bowl participants, this week's key games could decide the UPI national championship and help settle the confusion surrounding the Heisman Trophy voting.

Ohio State, which walloped Iowa 55-13 on Saturday, can wrap up the UPI Board of Coaches national championship with a victory over Michigan. However, should the Buckeyes lose and second-ranked Alabama defeat seventh-ranked LSU then the national title will be up for grabs and would not be decided until Alabama meets Auburn on Dec. 1.

There is no clear-cut favorite in this year's Heisman Trophy balloting, but the leading candidates appear to be Ohio State sophomore Archie Griffin, Texas junior Roosevelt Leaks, Penn State senior John Cappelletti and Pittsburgh freshman Tony Dorsett. All are running backs.

All enjoyed good days Saturday and all face some tough competition Saturday which could help settle the issue. Griffin, who gained 246 yards against Iowa, goes against Michigan's rugged defense Saturday while Leaks, who picked up 105 yards in a 52-7 rout of TCU, faces Texas A&M on Thanksgiving Day.

Cappelletti and Dorsett will be opposing each other Saturday as Penn State hosts Pittsburgh. Cappelletti gained 204 yards and scored four touchdowns Saturday as the sixth-ranked Nittany Lions routed Ohio University 49-10 and Dorsett ran for 161 yards in a 34-0 rout of Army.

In other games Saturday involving the top 10 ranked clubs, Alabama crushed Miami (Fla.) 43-13, third-ranked Oklahoma routed Kansas 48-20, Michigan whipped Purdue 34-9, LSU topped Mississippi State 26-7, UCLA clobbered Oregon state 56-10, Southern California walloped Washington 42-19 and 10th-ranked Nebraska decimated Kansas 50-21.
